'Guardian angel'

Pickering tot saved by off-duty police officer

BY LINDA WHITE
 STAFF REPORTER

For little Meghan Primosig, who celebrated her first birthday earlier this month, a guardian angel credited with saving her life is the best gift she could have ever wished for.

"She's a guardian angel, that's for sure," Meghan's mom Patti Primosig says of Durham Regional Police Constable Cheryl Carter, who revived the Pickering tot after she began convulsing in her car seat shortly after 7 p.m. Wednesday.

The off-duty police officer was exiting Knob Hill Farms grocery store on Hwy. 2 near Brock Road in Pickering when she noticed a swerving car.

"My first thought was that (the driver) was impaired or something was wrong because she was weaving across the lanes of traffic," recalls Const. Carter, an Ajax resident who works out of 19 division in Pickering.

But as the car turned into the parking lot at Knob Hill Farms, "I could see the look on (Ms. Primosig's) face and knew she was in distress. She was crying, 'My baby. My baby's in trouble. My baby's dying.'"

By the time Ms. Primosig pulled the baby from her car seat, Const. Carter was at her side, identifying herself as an off-duty police officer and assuring her she would be able to help.

"I did a couple of mouth sweeps because she appeared to be choking," recalls Const. Carter, 36.

She then began cardiopulmonary resuscitation. "After five or six breaths, she breathed back into my mouth...She started to slowly whimper. It was really nice to see her come back. There's something about children...She's a precious little baby. I just adore babies," says the mother of two boys, aged 13 and 11.

Meanwhile, Const. Carter had instructed Ms. Primosig to call 911. "I didn't want to go," Meghan's mother admits. "I didn't want to leave my baby...By the time I came back, she was sitting up and breathing."

Despite her training, Const. Carter — who's been with the force two years and whose husband has been with Metropolitan Toronto Police 20 years — was happy to hear the ambulance sirens approaching. "The baby was whimpering, but I wanted to See DURHAM/Page 2

Pickering toddler Meghan Primosig has a new friend in Durham Regional Police Constable Cheryl Carter. Const. Carter was off duty on Wednesday when she spotted Meghan's mother, Patti, in distress. The baby was convulsing and, Const. Carter says, "appeared to be choking" when she sprang into action. She performed CPR on Meghan until the toddler responded. Today, she's fine and Const. Carter was credited with saving her life.

Region moves to protect Pickering farm lands

BY MARIANNE TAKACS
 STAFF REPORTER

PICKERING — North Pickering residents are celebrating a victory in their battle against urban development in the town's agricultural preserve lands.

It came in the form of an amendment to the Durham Official Plan requiring the Ontario Realty Corporation (ORC), the provincial agency which owns the lands, to register conservation easements on land titles it sells to private ownership. The easements will require that the land only be used in the future for purposes currently allowed in an agricultural zone.

ORC officials had already agreed in principle to similar easements or continued public ownership for environmentally sensitive or significant lands and natural corridors in the preserve.

The easement requirement was fought for by the Green Door Alliance, an umbrella group of residents' associations and environmental groups with an interest in use and management options for public lands in Pickering, Markham and Uxbridge expropriated for an airport in 1972.

hear a full-blown cry."

When the child's mother hugged Const. Carter in thanks, "I told her, 'It's OK. I'm a mom too.' I thought, 'I better leave now, because I'm going to fall apart.'"

She praised Ms. Primosig for pulling off the road and for calling 911, but didn't get her name and address. It wasn't until the next day that Const. Carter could relax.

"That night, I didn't sleep at all. I didn't know how the baby was. The next morning, I went to the hospital and was told she had been released to her parents, so I knew everything was OK."

She dropped by to visit Meghan and her mother at their Pickering home Thursday.

Ms. Primosig says her daughter had a fever when the incident occurred, but she thought it was because the tot is teething. She has since learned her daughter has a throat infection, and doctors at the hospital told her convulsions may occur when a child's fever accelerates at a rapid speed. That caused Meghan, who was eating a cheese stick, to throw up and choke.

Const. Carter says this is the first time she's performed CPR in an emergency, but believes strongly in first aid training. "When a police officer arrives on the scene, people start thinking everything's going to be OK."

Const. Carter takes as much training as she can and reads a first aid manual in her spare time. "I don't want it on my conscience that something tragic happened because I didn't know what to do."

Though Ms. Primosig says she doesn't know if she would have been able to perform CPR if she knew how under the circumstances, the incident has renewed her desire to get training.

"I've called St. John Ambulance in the past to get information about courses, but one thing or another happened and I never took a class. Now I am definitely going to do it."

Decision applauded by conservation group

Regional Council approved the amendment last week.

Lorne Almack, a GDA director, likes the easement arrangement because an easement can't be appealed to the Ontario Municipal Board as a zoning can. As well, it can provide control of land management beyond use so that, for example, the land owner might be prohibited from cutting out a woodlot or damaging an environmentally-sensitive area.

"The GDA has been researching this since 1994," says Mr. Almack. "This is a very modern idea, very innovative."

He notes similar arrangements have been successful for preserving environmentally sensitive and agricultural lands in both the U.S. and U.K.

Ian Attridge, legal counsel for the GDA, points out that in the U.S. governments have had to spend millions of dollars to purchase easements for conservation purposes, while public ownership of the north Pickering land is giving government here the chance to preserve the natural environment without such a huge expenditure.

"It's an incredibly unique opportunity," says Mr. Attridge.

The 2,000-hectare agricultural preserve consists roughly of the area of Pickering east of the York and Metro borders, west of Duffins Creek and north of the Canadian Pacific Railway line above Finch Avenue up to the Fifth Concession.

It was first expropriated by the Province in 1972 for a community to accompany the proposed Pickering airport and was designated an agricultural preserve by the Province in 1993.

The ORC is currently in the process of selling off its lands in the area.

Mr. Almack says the Region's easement requirement will allow for the protection and preservation of some of the best farm land in the country, which includes a significant portion of 'class one' agricultural land.

"This land and the federal land north of it is the only remaining large block of class one land in Canada east of Toronto," he notes.

One issue that remains unsettled is who will hold the easements, since the Durham amendment states it will be the Town of Pickering and/or the Region of Durham.

Mr. Attridge expects in most cases they will be in the hands of the Town.

Meeting of the minds

Ecker, families of disabled discuss funding

'We know we need more money to go directly to families': MPP

BY LINDA WHITE
STAFF REPORTER

Parents of developmentally-disabled children who last week held a quiet demonstration outside Minister of Community and Social Services Janet Ecker's constituency office were invited inside Thursday.

While it's not the first meeting between parents and the Durham West MPP, members of the Durham Coalition of Families for Support to Persons with Developmental Disabilities are pleased Ms. Ecker listened to their concerns.

"For three years, we have been told to be patient," the coalition said in a letter presented to Ms. Ecker at the meeting in her Pickering office. "Many families which have had to cope unaided for years are now in crisis situations, with family members suffering health problems and stress-related illnesses as they have struggled to care for their loved ones with developmental disabilities."

Ms. Ecker — who wasn't at her office at the time of the demonstration — called Thursday's meeting "very worthwhile" and says those there "agreed on the need for better communication about what the ministry is doing to meet the needs of parents."

She has asked the coalition for a mailing list of parents interested in learning more about ministry restructuring and individualized funding in Durham and promises to arrange "a special contact person to provide information on policy issues."

Ms. Ecker says she also spoke to the coalition about her role as minister.

"I as a minister cannot make decisions on individual cases. That's what ministry staff is there for."

Therefore, when parents wrote to Ms. Ecker about the needs of their children and received a reply instructing them to write to another office, "they felt they were being brushed off," says Ms. Ecker. "I assured them that's not what I meant... Their concerns are being listened to."

The coalition asked Ms. Ecker for an additional $2 million for Special Services at Home funding and individualized funding in Durham Region — the amount requested by families here to pay for things like support staff reports local coalition spokesman Eleanor Werner.

"We're trying to have more resources go directly to the families," acknowledges Ms. Ecker, who realizes families in Durham and elsewhere need funding.

"We know we need more money to go directly to families."

That's why the government is "phasing out institutions, restructuring developmental services and why we are changing the way rehabilitative services are being delivered," explains Ms. Ecker.

She says she will meet with the coalition this fall — as requested — to listen to concerns of parents and review restructuring plans.

It's time for compromise on labor dispute

More lines in the sand are being drawn between the civil service and the provincial government over labor law changes related to restructuring in the municipal sector and school boards.

The legislation, which was introduced last week, would set up two commissions to address labor disputes.

But, it's curious to note Canadian Union of Public Employees Ontario president Sid Ryan's suggestion that "people are fed up with the politics of confrontation" when an Ontario Public Service Employees Union counterpart says they'll do "whatever it takes to get this bill stopped...or modified."

Somewhere in the middle, presumably, lies the fertile ground in which compromise can be reached over the Mike Harris government's controversial labor legislation proposed at Queen's Park. And that limited window of opportunity must be exploited if both sides are to forego a potential strike this fall that would see 180,000 public sector workers walk out — 10,000 of them in Durham Region.

On one side we have a Progressive Conservative government committed to labor reform and improved business efficiency and competitiveness in the province of Ontario. On the other side, we have public sector workers fighting for their entrenched rights to collective bargaining and independent arbitration.

But the rhetoric, as usual, is equally as damaging to the process as the dispute itself. We encourage CUPE and OPSEU members to abandon their current strategy of brinkmanship and extend a hand of compromise to the provincial government. We also urge the provincial government to remain open to what public sector workers are saying about the effects this legislation will have on their membership.

No one really wants a strike, least of all the people who live and work here in Durham Region with pride, professionalism and a commitment to those they serve.

Surely, there is some common ground where agreement can be reached.

Drivers of disabled kids need aides

To the editor:

I am a seasoned wheelchair school bus driver and I transport special-needs children.

I have often transported severely disabled children who along the route became distressed and I was unable to help them.

Because of the Privacy Act, we are not allowed to know anything about the child. I could have handled the incidents if I knew what to do.

Because of the children's severe disabilities, we as drivers need pertinent information. A medical emergency like a seizure may occur en route to school or home. We wouldn't know if they are prone to these seizures or how to handle them.

Special-needs drivers also deal with children who pull hair, bite, hit, punch, scream or spit. How do we handle this? We are alone on the bus with these children. How can we effectively drive the bus and handle these situations all at the same time?

Sometimes the children don't understand discipline, and other times they know we can't discipline them because we are behind the wheel of the bus. The solution is to put an aide on the buses. We need that aide who can spot a medical problem or control the behavior. The driver can't control behavior or meet medical needs behind the wheel of a bus. The school run may last 20 minutes to an hour. This may seem to be a short time, but to a driver who is trying to concentrate on the road and not the student, it seems forever. For every time we take our eyes off the road, we are at a potential risk of getting into an accident.

The recent fire on a bus in Ajax could have ended tragically if it weren't for the quick actions of the driver and a bystander to help remove a wheelchair-bound child. What would have happened if that bus was fully loaded with four wheelchair students, and out on some concession road somewhere? Would this driver be fortunate enough to get all the students off by herself? That's why there's a need for an assistant on buses in the event the driver needs help. As well, there are non-wheelchair mini-buses that transport approximately 19 special-needs students. Can we expect one driver to escort all those frightened children off the bus? Some students would bolt into traffic, some would panic and not move.

Special-needs drivers take on this job out of love for children. We only want the journey to school to be a safe and comfortable one for everyone on the bus, which may mean an extra hand to help us.

Shopping puts me on spin cycle

She up and left the other day.

I'll admit I'd been a little rough on her. I would put her through an emotional wringer over the littlest things. After she'd do the laundry, for example, I'd never thank her for the fine job she'd done cleaning my clothes. Instead, I'd try to find some excuse for yelling at her. "Where's my other sock?"

I must confess I'd been over-working her of late — to the extent that she was burned out.

So, she hit the road and hopped in a truck as I waved goodbye from the front window. She was gone, the victim of appliance abuse.

But, I'm not the only one to blame for the break-up. My better half was just as responsible. Heck, there were days when my mate would do three, four, even five loads of laundry. And, my better half's parents who live with us didn't even use softener. Yet, we're not totally at fault. The washer's mate must take some of the heat. After all, the dryer probably swallowed just as many socks.

Despite that, we don't want to be too hard on the dryer. He's still in mourning.

To relieve his grief, we've found him a good therapist and we've begun the arduous task of finding him a new mate. We've perused an appliance's version of Companions ads — Articles for Sale. We've checked out department stores, shops that sell all types of household necessities, including appliances, and outlets that sell appliances and nothing but appliances.

After visiting about 19 stores, we've narrowed our search down to about 17 washing machines.

In the process, we've managed to put 17 washing machine salesmen on spin cycle trying to match their competitors' offers.

We've read all types of guarantees: "We guarantee this washing machine will break down the day after the warranty expires. You can sign on for the extended warranty, at just $99.98 a year."

We've discovered that 'the lemon pledge' isn't just the name of a furniture polish. It's also one retailer's way of standing behind its products, "in the unlikely event anything might go wrong".

We've found out that the 'Famous Brand Name #1' washer that we liked so much at Store A isn't made in Canada by the parent company of 'Famous Brand Name #1'. Or, so said the pitchman at Store B, which incidentally didn't carry 'Famous Brand Name #1'. So, the Maytag man may not be busy repairing Maytags, but he's got his hands full fixing competitors' products.

And, it's one of those competitors' products we're leaning toward. As long as they throw in a dozen pairs of socks.

Programs for kids at Pickering libraries

PICKERING — The Pickering Public Library is offering a number of special programs this summer to keep youngsters busy.

'Take Flight...Read' is a take-home summer reading club for children six to 11 years old. Participants can earn free items from McDonald's by reading in their spare time and they will be invited to play Library Bingo. Drop by your local branch to register your child.

'Camp Read-a-Lot' is a reading club for children up to age six. Participants will receive a club tag, track their reading with a bear paw stamp, earn coloring sheets and take a dip in the Treasure Chest. You can register your child for the club at the Pickering Central Library or the Bay Ridges or Rouge Hill branches. Summer Storytime programs at the Pickering Central Library include Tales for Twos. Drop in for a special program of stories, songs and fingerplays with your two-year old on Tuesday, Wednesday or Thursday mornings at 10:05 a.m. now until Aug. 21. Storytimes for three-to-five-year-olds run for a half-hour on Tuesday, Wednesday or Thursday mornings at 10:45 a.m. from now to Aug. 21. No registration is required for either Tales for Twos or Storytimes. Storytimes for two-to-five-year-olds are also available at most branch locations. Contact your local branch for more information. The Pickering Central Library is also offering Summer Fun programs of stories, crafts and other special activities for children six to 11. They run Wednesday afternoons starting at 2 p.m. Tickets are $1 and are available as follows: from Saturday, July 12 for Go Fly a Kite on July 30; from Saturday, July 19 for In The Rainforest on Aug. 6; from Saturday, July 26 for Journey Into Space on Aug. 13; and from Saturday, Aug. 2 for By Land or By Sea on Aug. 20. ## Oshawa councillor wants highest court to rule on topless issue

DINA DYKSTRA
'I'm not going to stop'

Councillor says she 'don't back down from nothing'

BY BRIAN LEGREE
DURHAM STAFF

OSHAWA - Although council has adopted a policy prohibiting women to go bare-breasted on some City properties, an Oshawa councillor vows to continue her efforts to get the Supreme Court of Canada to review the issue of toplessness.

Central Ward Councillor Dina Dykstra announced in late June she plans on challenging an Ontario Court of Appeal ruling handed down late last year which is being interpreted as making it legal for women to go topless.

"I don't back down from nothing," said Coun. Dykstra when asked if she would reconsider her challenge in the wake of the City's decision.

"At this stage, until I'm satisfied there's appropriate action taken by the premier and the City, I'm not going to stop." Coun. Dykstra says she's taking the action as a private citizen, adding the issue remains in the hands of Port Perry-based lawyers.

"There's a lot of preliminary work involved," she says, adding the challenge could cost her $50,000 in legal fees.

City council voted 15-1 Monday in favor of a two-step approach to deal with toplessness, approving an expanded dress code policy and asking the City's legal department to draft a bylaw "to reflect community standards" on the issue.

Council decided to extend its dress code to require "women to wear tops which cover their breasts in all City-controlled facilities, indoor and outdoor pools, indoor recreation facilities as well as uncontrolled parks or beaches."

The City's dress code policy took effect last Tuesday.

Dangerous dogs face new bylaw in Clarington

Unprovoked attacks mean restrictions will be in place

BY CINDY UPSHALL
DURHAM STAFF

CLARINGTON - Any dog that's attacked someone without being provoked will be declared a vicious dog under a new bylaw passed by council Monday.

The vicious dog bylaw means any canine declared vicious would have to be confined on the owner's property.

When the animal is off the owner's property it must be leashed, muzzled and under the control of someone at least 18 years of age.

"I urge you to have it in place as soon as possible," Bowmanville resident Viv Woolford told councillors. "I think it goes a long way."

Mr. Woolford originally addressed council in May and asked for a bylaw protecting the community from dangerous dogs.

He made the suggestion after his daughter, Nadine, and her puppy were attacked by a larger neighborhood dog.

Nadine suffered injuries to her hands trying to protect her puppy, which was killed by the larger dog.

Another resident, Wayne Bellevue also urged council to enact the bylaw, telling councillors about an incident where a neighborhood dog ran out of its unfenced yard and attacked his dog.

"Our children and our neighbor's children have been living in fear because this dog still lives on our street and the fence is still not built," he said.

But Suzanne Stacey, a Rottweiler owner, worried a particular breed would be targeted under the bylaw.

"Our family concern is that a breed or breeds will be named in this bylaw," she said.

"I just want the members of the community to realize dogs aren't made bad, there are just bad owners."

Mr. Woolford stressed his concern is only violent dogs, not any particular type.

"It's not a breed issue it's just dangerous dogs," he said.

The bylaw will require anyone whose dog has been declared vicious to have it photographed and identified by a microchip implanted under the animal's skin.

The bylaw will be effective immediately.

Brooklin citizens' group ready to talk about tough issues

BROOKLIN - Concerned Citizens of Brooklin will hold a public meeting Thursday, July 17 to address issues facing the community such as housing development in the village and the expansion of Highway 407.

Residents will have the opportunity to express concerns regarding the impact of two new housing developments which would add 7,600 new residents to the community.

The group will also address the impact of

Hwy. 407 on the quality of life in the village and on property values.

The meeting will be held at 7:30 p.m. at Brooklin United Church located on Cassels Road East.

Girl seeks help to find hit-and-run driver

WHITBY - A 15-year-old Whitby girl who suffered minor injuries after being thrown from her bike in a hit and run last Friday is asking witnesses to come forward.

Rhonda Belich says she was crossing Garden Street at Dundas at 8:15 p.m. July 4 with a friend when she was "knocked off" her mountain bike.

"I went flying," she says, adding the male driver stopped "and then he got right back in his car and left again."

Durham Regional Police Inspector Greg Reid says there is an ongoing investigation but says it's difficult "if we have no description of the car."

"I'm wondering if anybody saw the accident and has the licence plate number," says Rhonda, adding "I had to be taken to the hospital by ambulance." Rhonda says her bike is "wrecked" and she is "really sore" from bruising on her left side.

"I don't really remember that much," she says. "At least if we can find him we can find out what happened."

Insp. Reid says the driver may face "rules of the road charges." If you have any information about the accident call 666-9228 or 579-1520.

Stolen car accident yields driver; charges laid

PORT PERRY - An Oshawa youth surrendered to police this week following a late-night accident just east of Port Perry involving a stolen car.

At about 2 a.m. Tuesday, Durham Regional Police report an officer was following a 1985 Pontiac 6000 along Stephenson's Point Road on Scugog Island when the car failed to obey a stop sign at an intersection with Island Road.

As a result, the vehicle skidded across Island Road and hit a fence and then a pile of garbage in a driveway. Three occupants fled the scene, but two returned a short time later.

Following a short investigation the name of the driver was obtained and police discovered the car had been reported stolen July 7.

A 17-year-old Oshawa youth surrendered to 17 Division in Oshawa the same day as the incident and was charged with theft under $5,000, possession of stolen property under $5,000, fail to report an accident, disobey stop sign and no driver's licence.

An estimated $2,000 damage was done to the car and $300 to the fence.

Have a berry good time

Close to home Pickering woman lauds crackdown on drunk drivers, unsafe trucks

BY CHRISTY CHASE
STAFF REPORTER

PICKERING — A Pickering woman whose brother was killed by a drunk driver 15 years ago on July 12 says new provincial legislation cracking down on impaired motorists is good news.

And, she applauds tougher laws for operators of unsafe trucks, claiming she got into an accident caused by a piece of ice flying off a big rig.

"Anything that stiffens the sentences ... I'm all for," says Jaime Brisebois.

"I really truly believe in stiffer sentences for all drunk driving. They're too lenient."

Ms. Brisebois' younger brother Greg was killed by a drunk driver in Scarborough as the 11-year-old was riding his bike when he was hit by a car.

The driver was sentenced to three years in jail, the stiffest sentence for drunk driving handed out at the time, but only served six months, Ms. Brisebois says.

"It was a tough thing to go through and (the actual time served) was another slap in the face," she says.

"We were very close, Greg and I. I was like a second mother to him," she says. "And then the 11 years we had were gone. I never got to see him grow up, get married and have kids of his own."

She welcomes proposed legislation that will see third-time convicted drunk drivers lose their licences for life and increased penalties and fines for all other impaired drivers.

The legislation can't be passed until education and alcohol treatment programs for all convicted drunk drivers are in place. The government hopes to have those ready next spring.

Ms. Brisebois says she'd rather see the lifetime driving ban come into effect after the second or even first conviction but is glad to see one proposed at all.

Gregory Brisebois was killed by a drunk driver in 1982 when he was 11 years old. His sister, Jaime, applauds tough new legislation governing penalties for impaired drivers.

"Why should you be endangering everybody else on the street?" she says of drunk drivers.

'I never got to see him grow up, get married and have kids of his own.'

- Jaime Brisebois

After her brother's death, Ms. Brisebois worked for years with anti-drunk driving groups and is disappointed at how slowly society and governments have been to strengthen penalties and condemn drinking and driving.

She believes everyone has to do their part to eliminate impaired driving and make our roads safe.

"It's the same problem today and it really hasn't improved much over the years," she says. "It's (drunk drivers') whole attitude. They feel they can get away with it."

Ms. Brisebois also likes the new legislation that makes truck owners and operators liable for fines of up to $50,000 if their rigs lose a wheel.

"I'm all for stiffer rules for that. Anything for safety."

Several motorists in Ontario have been killed after their vehicles were hit by wheels flying off transports on highways.

Ms. Brisebois had her own experience with a flying hazard last winter. She and her boyfriend, Fernando Silva, were heading for Pearson Airport at 5:30 a.m. one morning in January to fly off for a holiday.

As they were driving along, discussing the flying truck wheel situation, something came at them, ending up under their car.

"It lifted the car right off the tires and spun the car around and up against a guardrail.

"Now we were facing oncoming traffic," Ms. Brisebois recalls.

When they got out of the car, they discovered the object was a huge, round chunk of ice that they believe flew off a truck's spare tire as the ice was an exact match for the hub of a wheel.

The car was damaged but she and her boyfriend were not injured.

They even managed to make their holiday flight, after taking a picture of the ice chunk.

But the incident strengthened her resolve to continue to fight for safer roads in Ontario.

Under-10s suffer Power failure in soccer final

PICKERING — After winning four straight games, the Pickering Power Maxwell under-10 boys' rep soccer team ran out of steam in the final of the recent Darlington Invitational Tournament.

The Power came out on the short end of a 5-0 score against North Scarborough in the championship match. Chris Chappell was MVP for Pickering.

In Pickering's three round-robin games, the Power didn't allow a goal while tickling the twine for 13. Pickering defeated Darlington 2-0, thumped Uxbridge 6-0 and lambasted Leaside 5-0.

Power got solid goaltending from William Mitchell, with two shutouts, and Steele Defazio, with one shutout, in round-robin play. Defenders turning in great games were Daniel Silva, Stephen Boyle, Shawn Peterson and Scott Perry. Midfielders and forwards Alex Trujillo, Chappell, Ian Gibson, Chad Gaudet, Michael Sarangi, Nathaniel Underhill, Maverick Purchase, James McCardle, William Rodrigues and Justin Shoesmith had strong performances.

Scoring in the round robin were Trujillo with four goals, Chappell with three, Gibson and Silva with two each, and Gaudet and Sarangi with one apiece.

It took 20 minutes of overtime, but Pickering prevailed 3-2 in the semi-finals against Whitby. Trujillo scored twice, including once in overtime, and Gibson had the other Pickering marker.

It's no accident that Three Bears Autobody is the choice of area vehicle owners

The weather is hot so you're probably not thinking about the rust that's eating away at your vehicle. It may look small now, but it's going to get worse. So it's time to have your car or truck looking like new again and at the same time preparing it for those long winter months when rust never sleeps.

At Three Bears they also do specialty work such as repairs to truck caps.

Right now many people are visiting Three Bears Autobody for repainting, restoring, rust and dent repairs. "They want their cars looking their best and have the rust stopped before it spreads," says Kevin Bond. "Your car is a major investment and you want it to last as long as possible. In most cases it makes more sense, and costs a lot less money to have a complete body and paint job done than buying a new vehicle."

As an incentive to give your car a makeover, Three Bears is still offering $200 off on complete paint and bodywork or they'll pay the deductible up to $200. This offer lasts until July 31st.

Also available is a 90 day, no interest, no payment financing plan on approved credit.

"This is great for people that don't have collision on their car and need it fixed right away," says

Kevin. "Now they can get the work done and have time to pay."

Customers that have trusted the rust and collision specialists at Three Bears have never hesitated in coming back a second time. They know when the experienced staff work on their vehicle, it will be done right and at the best possible price.

This is especially true for those that have experienced rising insurance premiums associated with at-fault accidents and comprehensive claims. These people come to Three Bears because they know the staff do everything they can to keep the costs down.

Additional services provided include a free shuttle service as well as arranging a rental vehicle depending on your insurance coverage.

For more information about Three Bears Autobody call (905) 619-2327 or visit their shop at 282 Monarch Ave., Unit 20B in Ajax.
