

Ontario trumped by Ottawa: Ecker

BY MARIANNE TAKACS
Staff Writer

PICKERING — While she sympathizes with citizens worried about a possible airport in north Pickering, what happens there is up to the federal government and not the Province, says Durham West MPP Janet Ecker.

"I share their concerns and I'm going to continue to work with them to help them make their case to whatever the appropriate level of government is," says Ms. Ecker. Ontario Minister of Community and Social Services. But she notes the airport lands belong to the federal government and their fate is in Ottawa's hands.

"It's my understanding that the provincial government as a government does not have the legislative responsibility to take a position. Ottawa's authority trumps the provincial authority in this case."

Ms. Ecker also notes Ontario "is certainly not pushing an airport or doing anything that causes Ottawa to take action in any way", adding Queen's Park has no intention of removing the provincial zoning order which has limited development around the site since it was expropriated in 1972.

When federal Transport Minister David Collette announced in July the federal lands were being designated for airport use, he stated it was being done to prevent development in the area which would preclude the construction of an airport in the future.

"My understanding is that the provincial zoning order and the federal zoning order provide the same protection," says Ms. Ecker.

The MPP maintains the feds need to clearly lay out their plans for the lands instead of "getting everybody excited" by actions such as the designation.

"Ottawa has to make up their mind what they're doing up there. What the residents need is some clarity. If Ottawa's not going to build an airport up there then get out of the land business up there."

One factor working against an airport in north Pickering, according to Ms. Ecker, is the cost of building the roads and other facilities that would be required to service it.

It's the law!
Time to install carbon monoxide detectors

PICKERING — A new Town bylaw affecting home safety is now in effect in Pickering.

The bylaw, which went into force Nov. 1, requires approved and working smoke alarms and carbon monoxide detectors be installed in every residential dwelling in Pickering.

Fire department staff will provide visiting residents with information about their Home Safety Program Awareness packages and answer any questions about the bylaw or other matters of fire safety. Refreshments will be served and everyone in the community is welcome to attend.

For more information about the open house call 839-8095 and ask for the fire chief's receptionist. For more information about the new Town of Pickering bylaw phone 420-4660, ext. 2021.

Durham to get 42 more police officers

Tories make good on 50-50 cost-sharing deal with municipalities

BY STEPHEN SHAW
Staff Writer

An announcement the Province will provide matching funds for the hiring of 42 new officers is being greeted by Durham Regional Police Chief Kevin McAlpine as "good news," even though it falls short of the department's request.

The regional force will be eligible to receive $5.54 million this year as the Tories live up to an earlier promise to split with municipalities the salaries for 1,000 front-line officers across Ontario.

Durham Regional Police submitted a bid for 50 new officers under the Community Policing Partnership program.

"Obviously I'm pleased to see the Province is carrying through with the funding announcement, and we think it will be beneficial to the residents of Durham," said Bob Boychyn, chairman of the police services board.

A comparison to other major police forces in southern Ontario during last year's budget deliberations showed the force is understaffed by about 60 officers, Chief McAlpine said.

On average, major police departments have one officer for every 745 residents. In Durham, the ratio is one officer for every 828 residents, without taking into account population growth the past year.

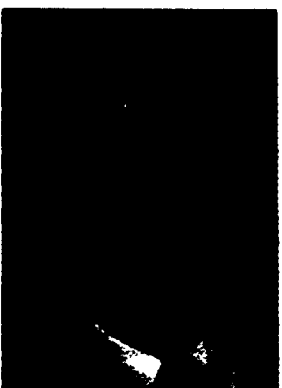

Even with an additional 42 officers, "it's still high," Chief McAlpine said of the figure.

"We have too few officers... Certainly the staffing level in this organization is lower statistically than other major forces."

The department's request to the Province asked for funds for 25 officers in 1998 and another 25 in 1999.

Still, "approval for 42 is pretty good news," the chief said.

The police services board previously approved the cost of 20 new officers in this year's budget, while the other five are "replacements," he said.

KEVIN McALPINE
'Approval for 42 is pretty good news.'

The board will now be asked to come up with matching funds for the other 17 officers this year.

And perhaps more, Chief McAlpine hinted.

"In that case (additional officers are needed) the Region may be asked to pay the full cost," he suggested.

"I think the board in 1998 recognized the need for additional staff, and that 20 was a beginning not an end to it."

The new recruits — some currently at police college, others to start training in January — should hit the streets next year.

Oshawa MPP Jerry Ouellette said in a written statement "there have been a number of safety concerns in Oshawa in the past" and the additional manpower will improve community safety in the region.

Under the program the Province will split officers' salaries with municipalities for five years.

Chief McAlpine said the increased strength will allow the force to crack down on traffic enforcement, "a top priority," based on residents complaints, and other problems such as prostitution and burglary.

Pickering to put a lid on garbage

Council looks at four-bag limit

BY MARIANNE TAKACS
Staff Writer

PICKERING — You'll only be able to put out a maximum of four garbage bags per week by next November under a new garbage collection bylaw endorsed by Pickering Council's executive committee Monday.

The new bylaw, which Council will consider Dec. 7, would also make it illegal to mix recyclable and compostable materials in with regular waste put out for collection.

As well, it would limit households to six garbage bags, receptacles or items (such as old furniture or appliances) by Jan. 18, in preparation for the further reduction next fall. There is currently no limit on the amount of garbage households may place at the curb each week.

Councillors also ordered staff to prepare a report by next fall on the feasibility of implementing a partial or full user-pay system for garbage collection in Pickering.

One of the main reasons Pickering is implementing limits now is because the Town's garbage collection contract expires at the end of October.

It's expected the cost of the next contract will be "quite a bit higher" unless measures are taken to reduce garbage volume, noted Ward 3 Regional Councillor Rick Johnson. "The most efficient collection system at the best price is what we're looking for."

Coun. Johnson urged citizens to contact their councillors before the next meeting to let politicians know how they feel about the proposed new regulations and the entire issue of waste reduction.

"We want to do this from the grassroots up and not from the bureaucrats down."

Some councillors were concerned about the $5,000 maximum penalty for violating the bylaw, and the lack of special provisions for any household that might at some time need to put out more than six or four garbage bags or items. They suggested residents should be able to buy tags for extra bags that would be collected for a fee.

However, Mayor Wayne Arthurs maintained the proposed bylaw should be approved without changes allowing people to go over the limit. He suggested residents could hold back bags for the next week if they had too many, or take them to the Squires Beach Road transfer station operated by Miller Waste Systems on behalf of Durham Region.

"There's going to be no real room for flexibility after Jan. 18," said the mayor, adding Council needs to be decisive on the issue. "Either we're going to do this Jan. 18 or not."

According to a report from Town staff, it's expected the new regulations will reduce disposal fees, collection costs and waste going to landfill, as well as increase the amount of recyclables collected.

Request made for psychiatric assessment

Claremont man charged in police chase death appears in court

BY STEPHEN SHAW
Staff Writer

The motorist charged in a fatal police chase that ended in an innocent man's death will spend the next month in custody at the Whitby Mental Health Centre.

David Franklin Doerfler, 35, of Claremont, is charged with criminal negligence causing the death of John Michael Gibbons, a father of six, and injury to his wife, Lorna Gibbons, 35, who survived the devastating Nov. 15 crash just outside Port Perry.

During a brief appearance Tuesday in Oshawa provincial court, Mr. Doerfler was ordered transferred by a justice of the peace from Whitby Jail to the psychiatric hospital.

Defence lawyer Ken Murray requested Mr. Doerfler undergo a 30-day assessment to determine whether he is criminally responsible and mentally fit to stand trial.

He returns to court Dec. 22. The Province's Special Investigations Unit is looking into the fatality and the role of police.

Durham Regional Police said officers initiated a high-speed pursuit after responding to a domestic call placed by the accused man's estranged wife, who attended the Port Perry police station about 1:40 a.m. in a state of panic.

As two marked cruisers showed up on scene, the pickup truck drove off and was pursued west on Hwy. 7A.

The truck was travelling at speeds in excess of 100 km/h when it reportedly went through a red light at the intersection of Hwy. 12 and slammed into the southbound car driven by Mr. Gibbons, 47.

In addition to the crash-related charges laid by OPP, Mr. Doerfler was also charged by Durham police with breach of probation, possession of a controlled substance and criminal harassment.

However, an OPP investigation into the collision, which occurred in its jurisdiction, found no grounds to lay a charge for fleeing police.

The SIU, meanwhile, has not said whether the three officers involved in the chase — two which have been designated "subject" officers for its probe, one a witness — activated their emergency lights or sirens.

Kelly Gibbons was the lone member of the victim's family to attend Mr. Doerfler's court appearance.

She came to court "because I want the answers" about her father's death and to get a look at the man who was allegedly responsible.

"I just want to know what happened. And I want to know what's going to happen to him," she said.

Electrical problem at nuclear station triggers emergency notification

PICKERING — An electrical failure in the Unit 8 reactor at the Pickering nuclear station Monday night resulted in the unavailability of some back-up safety systems for a few hours, reports Ontario Hydro.

However, the problem was rectified within three hours and the station was able to continue operation without interruption.

The partial loss of the class one voltage system in the reactor occurred at 10:50 p.m.

"The system permits protection and control to electrical equipment as well as to some safety system functions," says station spokesman Pat O'Brien, noting safety systems at the station have two independent power supplies.

"What happened is one of them went out on some systems, so we had that slight reduction in availability of some safety systems. The ability of the site to respond if something did happen was marginally impaired."

What occurred is classified as a 'Reportable Event' under provincial emergency notification guidelines.

The Atomic Energy Control Board and Emergency Measures Ontario were notified of the incident, as well as local municipal authorities.

The cause of the electrical failure was a faulty relay system, according to Mr. O'Brien.

"One switch didn't close when it should have and that's what triggered the electricity interruption."

Power was manually restored and the faulty relay taken out for examination.

Reactors 5, 7 and 8 are currently on-line at the station, with Unit 6 down for scheduled maintenance.

"The units continued to operate," says Mr. O'Brien.

"There was no problem at all with the reactor end of the business."

Durham Catholic students are plugged in to high-tech world

Durham board on track with technology goals

GRANT ANDREWS

"We are fortunate that our school system has staff who are highly motivated and committed..."

The Durham Catholic District School Board is on track with its plans to increase the use of technology in school classrooms across the region.

A report on the board's technology initiatives, presented to trustees last Monday, says the installation of new computers in schools and the use of programs such as TLC (Teaching and Learning with Computers) are continuing to provide "increased technological literacy" for students and teachers.

According to the board's staff report, the installation of cabling systems and electrical wiring for additional computers will be completed in separate schools across Durham next spring.

The board is also moving toward the implementation of the TLC program, introduced last year in all Grade 3 classes, in Grades 1 through 6 during the 2000-2001 school year and is currently upgrading technology in secondary schools.

Teachers across Durham Region are also undergoing computer training on the new electronic version of the provincial report card due out in December.

"The rapid increase in hardware, courseware, knowledge and skills in the area of technology is proving highly beneficial to students and teachers," board director Grant Andrews said in a report to trustees at the Monday, Nov. 16 meeting of trustees.

"We are fortunate that our school system has staff who are highly motivated and committed to the improvement of the learning process through the assistance of technology," he added.

Airport fight aid vowed

"I don't see us having any great pot of resources for that kind of infrastructure at this time."

Another is the space for expansion remaining at the Pearson and Hamilton airports.

"I think it's a little early to be talking about an airport (in Pickering) when we have unused capacity at Pearson."

The MPP says she likes the idea proposed by the Town of Pickering and Voters Organized to Cancel the Airport Lands (VOCAL) for a 'stakeholders forum' through which residents and different levels of government could discuss the future of the federal lands.

"I'm prepared to provide whatever assistance I can," she notes.

Ms. Ecker is also open to the idea of the selling of whatever portion of the property will not be required for a future airport.

"It would certainly be a step in the right direction in terms of getting some permanence for the residents who are there."

Guarding against a silent killer

Pickering's carbon monoxide detector bylaw may save lives

It's a silent killer. But, you can protect yourself against it. And you must.

A bylaw is now in effect in Pickering making it mandatory for every residential dwelling to be equipped with a carbon monoxide detector.

Not only is it legislation. It's a life-saver too. For carbon monoxide can creep up on you with no notice whatsoever. It's colourless, odourless and tasteless so it can't be detected by people.

And, the symptoms caused by carbon monoxide poisoning can be easily overlooked because they are often flu-like. With mild exposure, most people experience headaches, fatigue and nausea. Medium exposure can cause a severe throbbing headache, drowsiness, disorientation, confusion and an accelerated heart rate. Extreme exposure can lead to unconsciousness, convulsions, cardio-respiratory failure, and possibly death.

Death like that which devastated a Scarborough family of four earlier this year. Carbon monoxide poisoning in their home killed the father and his 12-year-old son, left the daughter in a coma and hospitalized the wife. That tragedy prompted Pickering Ward 1 Regional Councillor Maurice Brenner to propose the bylaw making carbon monoxide detectors mandatory.

Months later, they are. And not a moment too soon. As an expert in the field tells us, carbon monoxide poisoning can occur in any home unless you take certain precautions.

"Though carbon monoxide is more commonly associated with fires and automobile emissions, it can accumulate in anyone's home and become an invisible threat to our health and safety."

Invisible, undetectable, but insidious. The deadly gas can be produced simply by the incomplete combustion of fuels such as wood, natural gas, gasoline, diesel, kerosene, coal and charcoal. It is caused by lack of oxygen or a disruption in the burning process.

Household appliances like your furnace, water heater, stove, space heaters, charcoal grill or gas dryer can be sources of carbon monoxide, especially if they are not in proper working condition or have been installed improperly. In addition, vehicle exhaust fumes from attached garages and an improperly operating fireplace can also become carbon monoxide hazards. In other words, your home is filled with potential dangers.

If you need any more convincing to install carbon monoxide detectors in your home — preferably one adjacent to every living and sleeping area — the Pickering Fire Department will give you that extra nudge. The department is holding an open house this Thursday from 2 to 4 p.m. at its fire hall at 1115 Finch Ave. just east of Dixie Road. Fire department staff will answer questions about the carbon monoxide detector bylaw and other matters of fire safety. If you can't make it to the open house, you can get more information about the new bylaw by phoning 420-4660, ext. 2021.

The department and the firefighters are more than willing to share the knowledge they've gained first-hand about the many sources of carbon monoxide in your home and the hazards those sources pose.

They want you to go out and plunk down a few dollars to buy carbon monoxide detectors. A small price to pay to safeguard yourself and the lives of your loved ones.

Trim your waste

It's somewhat remarkable that Pickering officials have taken this long to get around to telling residents to put a lid on it.

But, Monday's decision by Pickering Council's executive committee to limit the amount of garbage residents can put out for collection is better late than never.

A bylaw, which Council will consider Dec. 7, would cap the number of garbage containers and unwanted furniture or appliances you can put curbside at six as of Jan. 18 and at four by next November. There is currently no limit on the amount of garbage households may place at the curb each week.

That's unbelievable, especially considering a few pertinent facts. For one, the push to recycle has been on for a number of years. Secondly, all other Durham municipalities except Brock Township have limits on the amount of garbage residents can put out. Finally, and possibly most importantly, one would think Pickering officials would have long ago drafted such a bylaw, given that the town is home to a number of landfill sites which have drawn the ire of residents for several years.

So, it's about time Pickering's civic leaders cleaned up their act and asked residents to follow suit. Cut out the garbage. Trim your waste.

YOU SAID IT

The question was:
How could parents get more involved in their children's education?

Verlie Snowden says, "They could volunteer in schools."

Fred Layton says, "Parents could spend more time with their kids, who should watch less TV."

Karen Shepherd says, "They could help with fund-raising and influence purchasing ideas."

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Kudos to teens who collected for food bank

To the editor:

I was pleased you recognized the efforts of several outstanding young citizens of Durham in a recent edition of the News Advertiser. I would like to identify eight more people who we should all be proud of.

Heather Barnes, Jennifer Black, Michelle Christian, Davina Khan, Heather Knowles, Aaron Mark, Allison Pierrey and Clare Wilson, all Grade 10 students at Dunbarton High School, decided to shell out for a different cause on Halloween.

They circulated flyers in their neighbourhood the week before Oct. 31 requesting residents help them by contributing non-perishable food to the local food bank.

As a result of their efforts and the generosity of the residents of Sundown, Cattail, Barry, Daylight, Edmund and Sheppard avenues, they were able to collect four large boxes with more than 200 pounds of food. This was donated to the food bank depot at the SuperCentre.

The students even got treats from most of the residents as well.

Kudos to the residents who helped these students exceed their goals.

Let emergency crews through to save lives like my daughter's

To the editor:

Too many times I have witnessed drivers speeding up to pass fire trucks, cutting them off or trying to out run them. Drivers become extremely annoyed when they are held up in traffic because a fire truck is blocking a lane and they may be late for work. When you are held up due to an accident, don't get upset; just thank God the firefighters are not trying to save the life of someone you love.

Recently, my daughter became another teenage accident statistic. Driving too fast on wet roads caused the car to smash into a pole. By a miracle no one was killed. Although my daughter suffered many injuries, she is alive.

Jan Foley,
Pickering

This letter is simply to make people aware of the need to allow emergency vehicles to get to their destinations as soon as possible and to publicly thank all those involved in the care extended.

During the hour it took to cut my daughter from the car, the crew from the fire station on Liverpool Road went out of their way to help her. During this long period, one firefighter asked how he could help while his team was trying to free her. All she said was that she didn't want to die as she was only 16 years old. She asked him to hold her hand. The firefighter, whose name I don't even know, held on to her the entire time and never let go. He gave her the hope that she would be fine and promised to get her out. As a mother, I would hate to think of her being so scared and so alone without someone so caring to help her. The captain even called our home the next day to see how she was doing.

No words can ever express my gratitude to all the emergency services people but especially those firefighters who worked so long and so hard to free my daughter.

So the next time you see an emergency vehicle, give it the right of way. You never know if it might be a loved one who emergency crews are trying to save.

Premier's opponents want debate

But showdown unlikely until election

Premier Mike Harris is happy sniping at opponents from the safety of TV commercials, but not as eager to confront them where they can shoot back.

The Progressive Conservative premier has charged in costly, controversial ads that Liberal leader Dalton McGuinty has no policy on health care. Mr. Harris's ads are unprecedented in that they picture Mr. McGuinty looking truculent as in a police mug shot, and previous premiers did not feel it necessary to run ads attacking an opponent months before an election.

They have led New Democrat leader Howard Hampton to ask Mr. Harris for a TV debate among leaders of all parties. Mr. Hampton argued that because Mr. Harris made his charge on TV, the best place to prove it is a leaders debate on TV.

Mr. Hampton, who is low in polls, has an axe to grind in that he is in danger of being overlooked in the struggle between Mr. Harris and Mr. McGuinty.

The Liberal leader, although he could be at some risk because he still does not have a full policy on health, offered to debate "any time, anywhere."

Mr. Harris has replied by renewing his attack on Mr. McGuinty for giving no clear indication how he would pay for extra spending he has promised on health. The Liberal has said only that it will come from a stronger economy and cutting fat.

The Premier suggested there already is a highly suitable forum where the leaders can debate and this is the legislature, which could allocate time for a debate on health in which all leaders could join.

Eric Dowd
At Queen's Park

A debate in the legislature would have disadvantages. In it each leader would give a set speech, as would other representatives of their parties, and the rules do not permit participants to interject a comment each time their rivals make a statement with which they disagree.

But debates on TV, now routine during elections, are normally structured so that leaders are questioned by independent panels and allotted time specifically to rebut opponents' statements, and formats often are flexible enough to allow them even to argue with each other.

A debate in the legislature also normally is in the afternoon and only on a parliamentary channel to which not everyone has access, but a leaders' debate in a TV studio could be at night on all stations that chose to run it.

Mr. Harris is not without nerve in pointing to the legislature as the ideal forum, because he has been there fewer than one-quarter of the days it has met this fall.

Mr. Hampton and Mr. McGuinty also were showing optimism in expecting Mr. Harris to debate them on TV. Premiers have not normally debated their opponents on TV except in elections — the exception was Bob Rae, a gifted speaker who when he was NDP premier and low in polls would debate anybody in search of votes.

Mr. Harris would have worried that he would be asked embarrassing questions about his own health policies. Premiers generally fear they will be prompted into a gaffe or not show the superiority expected of them over lesser-known opponents. An opponent of whom little is expected has merely to hold his own to be seen as a winner.

Premiers also worry that they elevate opponents merely by being seen debating them as equals and attracting audiences they could not lure on their own.

Some premiers have been unwilling to debate opponents on TV even during elections. In 1981, Tory Premier William Davis, who was mediocre in a debate in an earlier election, said he would debate that time only if all TV networks jointly produced the program. When friendly Tories then running Toronto's CFTO-TV said they would never co-produce with rival Global TV, there was no debate.

In 1985, Frank Miller, while briefly Tory premier, refused to debate on TV, fearing he would not look as young and contemporary as his opponents, and his reticence helped cost him government.

A premier would not dare refuse a TV debate in an election today because it has become an expected, integral part of campaigns, but Mr. Hampton and Mr. McGuinty will have to wait until the election.

Parents in schools add up to learning

'We just want the best for our kids. We want to make sure they're getting the best education...'

BY SUSAN O'NEILL
Staff Writer

By 8 a.m. on Wednesdays, the "hot dog ladies" are in full swing at Frenchman's Bay Public School.

Bags of buns and buckets of condiments line the tables in the staff room while a team of four parent volunteers busily prepares lunch for hundreds of pupils.

The scene has been a weekly ritual for several years at the Pickering school, where approximately 500 hot dogs are served up each week.

And, it's just one example of the many activities made possible by parent volunteers who dedicate their time to lend a hand at schools across the region.

"The hot dog thing is a riot," says Janice Kimble, a parent volunteer at Frenchman's Bay for the past two years.

"Once you've had a taste of volunteering, you want to do more. It's fun."

Parents are a regular fixture in elementary and secondary schools throughout Durham. Whether they're cooking hot dogs for lunch, reading with students in class or planting flowers in the school garden, educators say they couldn't do without the parents' involvement.

"Some of these women could be presidents or CEOs. They're amazing," says Frenchman's Bay principal Helene Daleman.

"If my secretaries are sick and I need help I just have to call a parent. If I have lice in the school, I just have to call a couple of parents and they'll check the class."

'I would say most teachers would say their parent volunteers just make the program possible.'
Stella Dorsman

And, with an enrolment of more than 800 students, Ms. Daleman says the school, which is known for its fund-raising efforts, simply couldn't be run the way it is without the help of parents.

"We're all part of this together," she says, noting the school's fund-raising committee has collected more than $48,000 this year alone. "I've never seen anything like it — the love that these parents have for this school. It's so positive."

Durham District School Board chairman Ruth Ann Schedlich isn't surprised. "There are all kinds of activities" going on in schools across the region thanks to parental input.

"In the high schools, parents have been very helpful in the commencements this year," she says. In elementary schools, parents read with students in class and organize fund-raising activities. "You would find parents at most of the schools in Durham."

Stella Dorsman, co-president of the Durham division of the Elementary Teachers' Federation of Ontario, says parents provide "an invaluable service" by helping with the preparation of materials, working with students in small groups and assisting teachers Parents of children attending Frenchman's Bay Public School in Pickering know the value of being involved in education. They do everything from cooking hot dogs one day each week, to providing reading assistance for students. At right, parent volunteer Patti Bayles-Thompson serves up one of hundreds of hot dogs cooked each week.

in the classroom. "I would say most teachers would say their parent volunteers just make the program possible."

She notes many teachers have a regular parent volunteer schedule and believes the involvement of a parent in their child's education makes "an enormous difference in the success a child achieves. You won't find a principal who doesn't foster parental involvement."

"We really think it's essential. Repeatedly we say the education of a child really is a partnership between the teacher, the school and the parent," Ms. Dorsman says. "The parents who supported the teachers (during their strike) a year ago were the parents who were in the school. They're our best allies."

In its report on the future role of school councils, released Nov. 19, the Education Improvement Commission (EIC) recognized the importance of parental involvement in schools.

"Parents play the first and most important role in their children's education," the commissioners say. "By helping with homework, asking about the day's events and expressing interest, care and guidance, parents are the primary factors in their child's success."

"Parents, students and other community members also contribute to and enhance classroom learning by acting as mentors, classroom and library helpers and fund-raisers," the report says, describing those roles as "critically important to the success of students and schools."

At St. Bernadette Catholic School in Ajax, principal Colin Edgecombe says, "Without support from the home we couldn't do our job as well."

He reports parents are involved in everything from running a soup program for pupils every Friday to looking after the school's garden in the summer.

"We wouldn't have time to do all those things," Mr. Edgecombe says. "They really do add to the life of the school."

'The crucial involvement between teachers and parents is directly linked to the students' achievement.'
Carol Dempsey

And while parental involvement tends to differ in secondary schools from that at the elementary level, Carol Dempsey, principal of Whit-by's Henry Street High School, reports, "You still need parent support and parents as good role models."

The "crucial involvement between teachers and parents is directly linked to the students' achievement."

Ms. Dempsey says parents tend to take a back seat in high schools and reports the students themselves are more involved.

"In a secondary school, a lot of the volunteer work is actually done by students."

"It gives them a leadership role. We're trying to help students develop the skills that will make them become good parents and leaders when they become adults."

"I'm always impressed with the calibre of the students who get involved in the student council," says Ms. Dempsey, who notes at the secondary level those pupils play a key role in everything from organizing the senior prom to raising money for the school.

"We're always there to guide them, but sometimes we're functioning just as a safety net."

At Monsignor Paul Dwyer Catholic High School in Oshawa, school community council chairman Debbie Scott says parent volunteers help students organize events such as dances. But, "It's very difficult to be very active. It's very frustrating, this (teachers') work-to-rule. We try and do what we can. Whenever I'm needed, there I am."

Ms. Scott, who is just beginning her two-year term as SCC chairman, says she chose to become active at Dwyer because "I find it's the only way to know what's going on at the school."

When students reach high school, many "just don't bring home the notes" to keep their parents updated on their progress.

'I like to keep an eye on things and to hear what's going on. From our kids' point of view, they love it.'
Velaine Gabura

And, Ms. Scott points out, as a member of the SCC, "You get to give your input as well."

Many parent volunteers like to see first-hand what's going on in their child's school.

"I think it's important for the school to have parents here," says Frenchman's Bay parent Velaine Gabura.

"I like to keep an eye on things and to hear what's going on. From our kids' point of view, they love it."

"We just want the best for our kids. We want to make sure they're getting the best education," says Pickering mom Nancy Douse, whose three children attend the French immersion program at Frenchman's Bay.

"The more parents are involved, the better the kids do."

"I don't know what you would do if you didn't have that kind of assistance," says Joan Patterson, principal at Pickering's William Dunbar Public School.

'Our day is just so much richer because of it. Your infrastructure is stronger because you have that involvement.'

Joan Patterson

She's "absolutely sold" on the benefits of developing partnerships with parents in the community. "Our day is just so much richer because of it. Your infrastructure is stronger because you have that involvement. There is a sense of community that is developed through that."

Although "we don't have a big turnout at our school community council meetings," Ms. Patterson says parents get involved in different ways, like driving students to cross-country meets and helping out in the office.

"You have to honour the uniqueness of each school and how they want to be involved. Here, they want the one-on-one."

John Sheremeta, chairman of William Dunbar's SCC, says while fund-raising continues to be the "primary focus" of the group, parents are "trying to branch out into different areas" with the establishment of several task forces this year.

"Our parents are actually players, not spectators."

The parent volunteers are "the strength of the school," says Susan Wright, a physical education teacher at William Dunbar. "Their dedication is unbelievable."

"You say 'we need' and they're there," Ms. Patterson says.

"Parents want to make it a better place for their kids. They're really looking out for their children."

Mike O'Connor, president of the Durham elementary division of the Ontario English Catholic Teachers' Association (OECTA), says parents also "work with the curriculum", noting some who are artists, authors or musicians often volunteer their expertise in the classroom.

"It's tremendously important."

"It certainly broadens what a school can offer kids. It also highlights the connection between home and the school and the kids who realize that are much easier to reach."

News Advertiser Reader Poll

Last Week's Question: Durham Regional Council is considering a review of how the chairman is chosen. Do you think the chairman should be appointed by Regional councillors or directly elected.

There is no question that the regional chairman must be an elected official. Like all Regional councillors, the chairman must be accountable to the electorate. This review is timely given the indifference displayed by our current chairman regarding the proposed airport designation.

There's a third choice here and that is to be elected by the Regional council. They can elect a person who has already been elected to the council; not somebody from outside.

It should be an elected position, elected by the people.

The chairman should be elected by the regional council from among elected members. (The current system) smacks of cronyism and the 'Old Boys Club'.

I believe he should be directly elected and not appointed by regional council.

Courthouse speculation heats up

Where will new Durham facility be built?

BY CINDY UPSHALL
Staff Writer

A decision by Whitby councillors has renewed speculation Oshawa may not be the site of Durham's new courthouse.

Whitby's planning and development committee last Monday approved a public administration zoning for a number of blocks within a 100-acre prestige industrial area owned by Nordeagle Developments. The zoning would allow provincial, federal and local government buildings and offices in addition to previously permitted industrial uses. The rezoned land is on the north side of Victoria Street west of Iroquois Park near the Brock Street Hwy. 401 interchange.

"I have a developer who wants that designation on his property," says Mayor Marcel Brunelle, noting public administration is just one type of development allowed on the industrial site, expected to generate hundreds of new jobs. "To allow for a public administration building on the site only makes sense."

Acknowledging a courthouse would fall into the category of a public administration building, he says, "I don't think anyone should jump to conclusions."

On the other hand, "If a developer wishes to submit a request for a proposal on that site...it only makes sense we allow for that development."

Speculation has circulated recently the Province is considering issuing a request for proposals to build a new consolidated Durham courthouse, announced for Oshawa in 1995 by the then-NDP provincial government.

Saverio Montemarano, owner of Nordeagle Developments, says pursuing a courthouse "absolutely was not the reason" he applied for the zoning.

MARCEL BRUNELLE
"It only makes sense we allow for that development."

Nicholas Macos, spokesman for Nordeagle, said at Monday's meeting there is no confirmed tenant for the public administration-zoned site, but added his client felt the zoning would make it easier to find a tenant for the property. His comments were made in response to questions from Chris Williams, a lawyer specializing in municipal law, who would not reveal the client he represents.

Mr. Montemarano said he would likely consider submitting a proposal for the courthouse if the government chooses to take that route.

"Probably I will, but at this time I haven't yet," he said. "I would be stupid if I didn't."

Durham Centre MPP Jim Flaherty says the courthouse issue and its location are currently being reviewed by Rob Sampson, Minister Responsible for Privatization.

"The issue is how do we get the best deal for a courthouse for taxpayers in Durham Region. It's an economic issue. It's not a municipal issue in terms of which municipality."

Mayor Brunelle says, "I would be absolutely delighted if the courthouse came to Whitby, but that's subject to a request for proposal and I think that should happen."

He says if and when a request for proposals is issued, there could be a number of proposals submitted by different parties and the courthouse "should go in the best place that makes sense."

Oshawa Mayor Nancy Diamond, who has been adamant the courthouse would come to her city, could not be reached for comment.

One group which would be less than pleased if the decision to re-examine the courthouse location is reopened is the Oshawa-Clarington Chamber of Commerce, which sent Premier Mike Harris a letter urging him to follow through with the commitment to construct the facility in downtown Oshawa.

"The chamber of commerce strongly supports the involvement of the private sector in the design and building process," states the letter. "However, we cannot support any decision to reopen the discussion on the site. Oshawa has been told the courthouse will be built here. Any attempt by the government to reopen the process is betraying the trust of Oshawa's business community, and may be looked upon as purely for political gain."

Bob Malcolmson, executive director of the chamber of commerce, explains, "All we're saying is the City of Oshawa and the business community and other people have set their plans in motion based on this so just get on with it, because we need to revitalize our downtown."

Canadian Solid Waste Expo spells opportunity

Canada's only solid waste management show for the collection, hauling, and disposal industry is being held Dec. 2 to 3 at the International Centre in Toronto. More than 250 major suppliers to this market will be present. As well, many on-site events are being held throughout the show, such as no-charge technical sessions, site tours and keynote speakers. This is the first time an event of this nature has been held in Canada and, as a result, the response from both exhibitors and delegates has been excellent.

An exhibitor and a sponsor of the Expo, the Composting Council of Canada (CCC), recently held its 8th annual conference in Ottawa. Participants learned about the importance of recovering organic resources to supplement soil erosion and its use on golf courses etc., and discussed chemical fertilization and pesticide use.

Many technical sessions that contained a wealth of knowledge from university professors regarding the chemistry involved in soil analysis prove that the scientific community regards the study and application of quality compost with the deepest regard.

While scientists are analyzing different soil compounds and discovering recipes of compost feedstock for a quality product, our task is to devise systems to capture this wonderful resource for upcoming markets.

Visit the CCC booth to learn how your workplace can incorporate composting into its waste management plan. In addition, the CCC is co-hosting two special events Dec. 3. You can join a networking breakfast and attend, for $20, a session on Meeting Compost Guidelines: Testing Methods and Marketing and Organics Collection. To register for the complimentary breakfast by Nov. 27, or to obtain the CCC's conference proceedings that soon will be available, call 416-535-0240.

Organizers of the Expo are practicing what they preach too. Food services staff have been instructed to separate food for composting. Also, while viewing all the booths look for special boxes to collect recyclables.

Canadian Solid Waste Expo tickets are available at the door for $20; on-line at www.exposition.com; or by calling Lee Baker at 416-782-4753. The event is sponsored by Ontario Waste Management Assoc., Solid Waste Association of North America, Solid Waste and Recycling Magazine, and the Composting Council of Canada.

Last week both towns put out less waste at curbside.

Pickering residents sent 422.36 tonnes to landfill while Ajacians generated 387.82 tonnes.

Pickering is still winning the Mayor's Challenge, however, Ajax is closing the gap.

COMING EVENTS: Dec. 1, 5-9 p.m. at 605 Rossland Road, Whitby. Durham's Public Advisory Committee on the Long Term Waste Management Strategy Plan is hosting its first public display and information session at Durham's regional headquarters.

Ajax-Pickering downs undefeated Scarborough Thunder in final

Tyke Dolphins Central Ontario football champs

The Ajax-Pickering Dolphins tyke football team stole the Thunder from defending champion Scarborough Thunder to capture the Central Ontario Minor Football League championship at Burlington's Nelson Stadium Sunday.

The underdog Dolphins scored an 18-12 upset win over the previously undefeated Thunder to capture the trophy.

Ajax-Pickering advances to the Wilson Bowl, the provincial tyke championship, in Kitchener-Waterloo next week.

Scarborough scored first and led 12-6 at half-time. Focused and confident in the second half, the Dolphins controlled play en route to the victory.

The Dolphins tied the game in the third quarter and, cheered on by a large loyal following of fans, took the lead for good in the final period.

Touchdowns by Troy Bentley, Luke Moyer and Robert Spagnola powered the Dolphins to victory.

Post-game ceremonies saw the championship trophy presented to Dolphins' head coach Ken Fedosen, while the players received individual trophies. Led by their captains, the players savoured a victory lap around the stadium.

Durham Dragons breathe love of hockey into special players

League continues tremendous growth

BY AL RIVETT
Sports Editor

Many youngsters lace up the blades with dreams of National Hockey League careers and stardom.

But some special players in Durham Region don't have such lofty goals. They only want to play hockey for the fun it provides.

Each Saturday morning for the past four seasons, the Ajax Community Centre has played host to the Durham Dragons whose lineups are made up of special-needs people throughout the region.

The Durham Dragons have been a labour of love for founders Dave and Cindy King of Port Perry. Special hockey has grown in leaps and bounds since they launched the Dragons in the fall of 1995. The Kings had no ice time, no uniforms and no sponsors. What they had was a number of special-needs players with a yen for hockey.

"Four years ago, there was nothing; nobody was offering special hockey," reports Mr. King. "Now, it has gone right through North America."

And, the Dragons make up the fastest growing hockey organization of its kind in North America. After starting with 21 players, the organization has experienced tremendous growth, now providing hockey for 56 players aged five to 45 years who make up four teams — two in the senior category for those with more ability and two in the junior bracket for the less experienced.

Each season, which runs from October to March, the four Dragons' teams play 18 interlocking games against two squads from the North York Gladiators organization, four Toronto Tornados clubs and two teams from the Cookville Crusaders.

This year, as they have for the past four, the Dragons will ice all four teams at a North American tournament in Ottawa this month. The event features squads from throughout Canada and the U.S., including teams from St. Louis, New York, Hartford, Colorado and Washington. In previous years, the Dragons have played in international hockey tournaments in St. Louis and New York City.

Mr. King reports he got the idea to start special-needs hockey in the region when son Kevin, who has Down's syndrome and is now 21, wanted to continue playing the game. He played minor hockey in Whitby before moving to Toronto's Grandravine special hockey league for six years because there was nothing in Durham.

"He played regular hockey in

DAVE KING
Started league from scratch

CINDY KING
League is labour of love

Whitby for as long as he could," says Mr. King, one of 14 coaches in the Dragons' organization.

In founding the special league, the greatest challenge was to acquire the necessary ice time. That task is still the most trying part of running the Dragons, notes Mr. King. "There's not enough time for all the ice users."

Besides that, the most pressing need of the Dragons was finding sponsorship and equipment for the players, says Mr. King. With ice time for the year costing approximately $3,500, there's always been a need for sponsors. A number of area businesses and individuals willingly obliged so the Dragons currently boast around three dozen sponsors, most of which have been on board since day one.

But, the Kings say seeing the players' progress on the ice over the years has more than made up for the hard work they've put into the organization.

"The parents didn't know or believe that their kids could skate," says Mr. King. "Right now, we have eight or nine kids who can't stand up on their skates, but by Christmas, they'll be skating and playing hockey. It's amazing how fast they can learn."

Adds Mrs. King: "You have to see the kids in action to see what they can do."

The Kings also get payback by seeing the players flourish both emotionally and physically. Their son, Kevin, a goalie with the senior team, has made numerous friendships through his involvement with the Dragons over his years.

"He has friends all over North America now," says Mr. King. "He's made friends who he's had for years through this thing."

Rob Henshaw, of Whitby, is a big booster of Dragons hockey. His son Christopher, 14, has played with the Dragons since the organization's inception and last season was named the most improved player in the junior program.

Mr. Henshaw says his son has steadily improved his hockey skills over the years.

"It's amazing to watch these kids. When they first start, they get on the ice with walkers, but they get the individual attention they need. From time to time, they make a real breakthrough. You can look at that same kid in a few months and he's skating with the puck. It's pretty amazing. In my son's first two years, he barely touched the puck, but now he's scoring five goals in a scrimmage game."

Mr. Henshaw notes his autistic son especially enjoys the camaraderie.

"The opportunity to be a part of something, that's a special thing. They all fit in and they all keep moving forward. Everyone's part of it."

Kathy Harwood, of Port Perry, says her daughter Julie, 18, one of only two girls with the Dragons, has learned hockey quickly since joining the club two years ago. She's now a member of the Dragons' senior team.

"She really likes it and looks forward to it," says Mrs. Harwood. "I'm very supportive of it. I like to get right in there and cheer for her. She says she's going to get a goal and she's been close."

Mrs. Harwood is especially glad to see her daughter, who's mentally and physically delayed, participating in a physical activity and meeting new friends. "She likes getting around and meeting people."

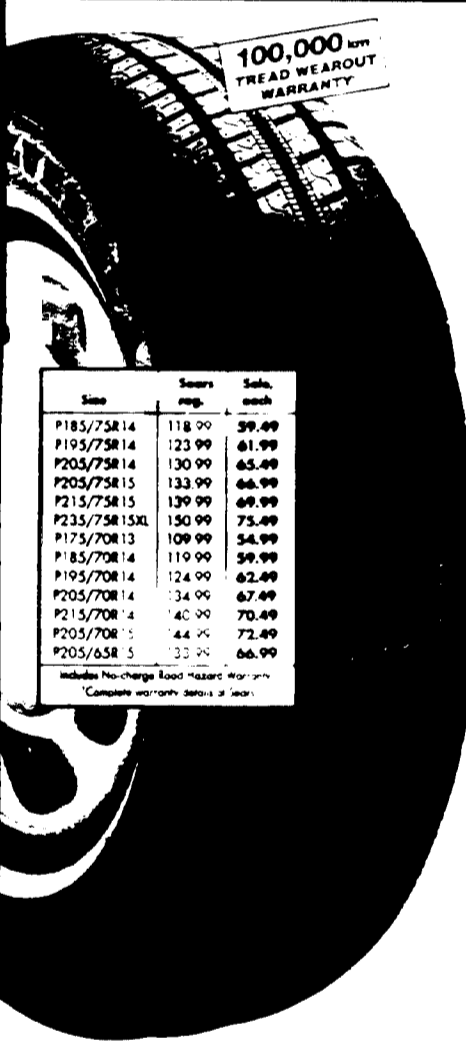

That's also true for Ron Walmsley, of Oshawa, a three-year member of the Dragons who plays defence on the senior team.

"He likes going out with the guys and playing hockey," says Ron's father, Ron Walmsley Sr. "He likes to get out and meet people and he likes the tournaments too."

Mr. King says there's no doubt Durham Dragons special hockey will continue to grow. In the 1999-2000 season, the Dragons are planning to run their own house league and ice two travelling teams which will continue to play squads from throughout the Toronto area.

Panthers lose at home, win on the road against top clubs

Pickering juniors go from pussy cats to Panthers

BY AL RIVETT
Sports Editor

PICKERING — The Pickering Panthers earned a split of weekend games, rebounding from a lacklustre effort at home against Kingston with a solid performance on the road against the Trenton Sting.

After coasting through a 6-3 loss to the first-place Kingston Voyageurs Friday at the Pickering Recreation Complex where the Panthers looked more like pussy cats, the Panthers rediscovered their physical game against the second-place Sting for an 8-6 win in OHA Ontario Provincial Junior 'A' Hockey League action in Trenton Saturday.

The weekend split drops the Panthers (13-8 for 26 points) into fifth place in the 13-team East Conference standings. Pickering trails the fourth-place Wellington Dukes by three points.

The Panthers faced the Ajax Axemen at the Ajax Community Centre Tuesday night after our press deadline.

Panthers' assistant coach Eric Ross was disgusted by the poor effort in Friday's game but delighted by the team's turnaround against Trenton.

"They were challenged to increase their physical play and concentrate on winning the one on one battles against Trenton, and they certainly did that Saturday. We didn't compete on Friday night at all. Going into this weekend, we were using the Kingston and Trenton games as a marker of where we stood, but I wasn't happy with the effort on Friday at all."

In Saturday's match against Trenton, the Panthers trailed 3-1 early in the first period and ended the frame down 3-2. The Panthers turned the tables in the middle stanza, going into the dressing room up 6-5. The Panthers outscored the hosts 2-1 in the final frame.

Marcel Rodman led the charge with a hat trick. George Trifon responded with two goals. Mike Hanna, Brett Macrury and Jeff Milroy had single markers. Joel Johnston recorded three assists in the Trenton contest.

Meanwhile, on Friday night, the Panthers dug themselves a big hole in the first period, trailing 4-0 at intermission. Pickering continued its uninspired effort in the second frame which ended with Kingston ahead 5-1. A better effort in the third period by the Panthers produced two more goals, but it was too little too late for the home side.

Mike Hanna, Brett Macrury and Luc Chiasson scored for Pickering

Panthers' goalie Joel Cameron started Friday's game against Kingston, but a slightly pulled groin in the first period brought backup Paul Guthrie in for the remainder. Guthrie handled the netminding chores in Saturday's win over Trenton.

The Panthers travel to Auburn, New York for a two-game set against the Junior Crunch on Friday and Saturday nights. They finish the weekend at the Pickering Recreation Complex against the Wellington Dukes Sunday at 7:30 p.m.

Sweep victory

Peewee Panthers show their Excellence

PICKERING — The Pickering Panthers Bay Sports/Sports Excellence major peewee 'AA' rep hockey team posted a decisive 7-4 victory over Oshawa in recent league play.

Matt Fettes and Kyrice Aitken turned in three-point performances with two goals and one assist apiece. Defenceman Steve Farmer opened the scoring with assists from Brett Connolly and Eric Neubauer. Farmer later scored on an end-to-end rush, while brother Derek Farmer also contributed a goal and an assist.

Other strong performers were wingers Brian Campbell and Gordie Brettell with two assists apiece. Defencemen Kale Smith, Eric Hanna and Ryan Gemon were solid in turning away the opposition. Hanna and Smith each earned an assist in the contest.

Forwards Kyle Harding, Tyler VanGijn and Jennifer Sadler were tenacious in their forechecking.

Goalie Mike Fleming had a great night between the pipes, making a stellar split save at a critical point in the game.

Ex-Material Girl mimic finds new material

Ajax's Cory Diamond minds Sonata's Sinatra act

BY AL RIVETT
Staff Editor

AJAX — Cory Diamond has given up mimicking Madonna. Now, she's doing things 'my way'.

The 31-year-old former Miss Ajax has performed as a Madonna tribute artist, travelling around the world singing, dancing and, yes, looking like the blonde bombshell at the height of her popularity. After several years of performing as Madonna, including a show at Toronto's CNE last summer, she's put aside that persona to concentrate her energies on the management and promotion end of the entertainment industry.

"I believe God has given me the gifts to do more than live someone else's life," notes Ms. Diamond who at one time was rated the best Madonna impersonator in Canada. "I've done that and now it's time to move on."

She's formed Diamond Entertainment Inc. with her father John Diamond, an Ajax resident who once served as a producer of the acclaimed children's show Fraggie Rock, the creation of puppeteer Jim Henson.

And, one of her star performers in Diamond Entertainment's stable of clients is Rick Sonata, who's been wowing North American audiences with his impersonation of the late Frank Sinatra.

In the wake of the Chairman of the Board's death earlier this year, there's renewed popularity in the music of Old Blue Eyes. So, Toronto native Sonata is a much sought-after performer in the U.S.

"Americans are just gobbling him up," says Diamond. "They can't get enough of him. Unfortunately, through (Sinatra's) death, there's been a resurgence in his style and music. (Sonata) is someone who performs Sinatra with respect. It gives the kids the closest thing to Sinatra like they are going back in time."

Sonata has recently appeared at the New York, New York Hotel and Casino, the Mirage in Las Vegas, the House of Blues in New Orleans and the Taj Mahal in Atlantic City, to name a few.

After upcoming stops in Hamilton and Buffalo, he's booked to appear at a Salute to Sinatra at Toronto's St. Lawrence Centre for the Arts Saturday, Dec. 12. The date is significant as it's Sinatra's birthday. Sonata will appear with the 14-piece Galaxie All-Star Orchestra.

When she's not guiding the career of Sonata, Diamond is also promoting big band dances in Canada and the U.S. She says audiences of all ages have been turning out to big band and swing music and the dances, as they were in the '40s and '50s, are back in style.

"All ages are coming out. It's nice to see the Generation X'ers coming out to them. We want to keep big band dances alive and re-educate people about the music," she says.

Although Diamond's jumped into the management side of music and performing with both feet, she still finds time to work on acting projects. She will be a featured reporter on the show Love and All That Stuff coming to the Global Television Network in March. It's all about weddings, love and honeymoons. The pilot will be shot in Los Angeles in mid-December.

Toronto native Rick Sonata is finding a measure of success playing to crowds as Frank Sinatra. He's managed by Ajax resident Cory Diamond.

Pickering pianist key player in gospel music

Warren Parker a favourite in Canadian gospel circles

PICKERING — A Pickering musician won a prestigious Covenant Award for gospel music when the Canadian Gospel Music Association (CGMA) handed out its hardware in Waterloo last month.

Warren Parker received the CGMA award for favourite instrumentalist of 1998.

Together, he and wife Shannan Parker were nominated for four Covenant Awards, including Favourite Vocal Group, Favourite Male Vocalist, Favourite Female Vocalist and Favourite Instrumentalist.

Mr. Parker sings and plays piano with his wife and, together, they travel across North America, playing more than 200 concerts each year.

Their group includes multi-instrumentalist John Lee Clarke, Brian Parker served as the live sound engineer and Edna Parker is their booking and promotional manager.

"I don't consider this award an individual effort," says Warren Parker.

"I thank the Lord for giving me this talent, my wife for always being by my side and encouraging me every step of the way, my family for their never-ending support and my peers within gospel music for sharing with us a unity of purpose."

The latest release by Warren and Shannan Parker is A Chapter in Time, a collection of classic gospel songs, which is currently receiving airplay on gospel music stations across Canada and the U.S.

They have two previous releases, Endless Well, which received the highest rating in The Singing News, America's premier Southern Gospel music magazine; and Goodbye, World, Goodbye, an instrumental album featuring Mr. Parker on piano.

Pickering resident Warren Parker was honoured as the favourite instrumentalist by the Canadian Gospel Music Association.

Women of Distinction honoured

Eight amazing women from Durham Region were honoured with the YWCA's Women of Distinction Awards last Tuesday night.

The women were each presented with the silver award pin in the 17th annual awards ceremony that celebrates excellence in arts and culture, business, professions and trade, community service, education, training and development, health care, sciences and technology, sports, fitness and recreation, non-traditional roles and young women.

"Wonderful" is how Colleen Wingrove, winner in the sports, fitness and recreation category, described her feelings after the awards presentation.

"It was an honour to be nominated," she said. "I'm very pleased."

The Oshawa resident is president of Parkview Place Tenants Association, is a member of the board of directors of Oshawa Senior Citizens' Centre and an elder at Simcoe Street United Church.

"I'm really thrilled," said Whitby student Devon Christie, who was named the Young Woman of Distinction.

"I just think it is so nice that the Y can recognize the contributions of so many women. It's really encouraging to me to know that I'm inspiring others," she said. "All of the nominees were winners here tonight."

The active young woman, a student at Sinclair Secondary School, is the current chairman of the Sinclair Students Together Against Violence Committee and the student Crime Stoppers Board. She's been recognized for her citizenship, sports involvement and academic achievements. She volunteers, competes in long distance running and sings in the Durham Philharmonic Choir.

The winner in the arts category is Linda Paulocik, curator/executive director of the Station Gallery in Whitby. The Oshawa native has earned, during her 24 years at the gallery, respect in the province's art community. She has developed a number of courses at the gallery through which many young artists have started their careers. She's been instrumental in the gallery's outreach programs and successful fundraising events. She's been invited to be a guest lecturer at Queen's University's fine arts program and is an arts auditor for the Ontario Arts Council.

Jennifer Morrison and Joanne Ferguson, both of Oshawa, won in the business category. Ms. Morrison, diagnosed with ovarian cancer at 17, has overcome many challenges and now speaks publicly about dealing with cancer. After graduating from Durham College, she and her husband, who have two children, started their own computer company. She also works in the community relations department of the Oshawa site of Lakeridge Health Corporation. She's a volunteer reporter with Roger's Cable and sits on the board at Hearth Place, a support centre for people with cancer and their families.

Ms. Ferguson is an advocate for women and children who face battles in the legal system and fights for victims' right to privacy. She is currently a part-time graduate student in alternative dispute resolution, volunteers for school and community groups and is a board member of the Durham Rape Crisis Centre.

Carole Keys, of Whitby, is the winner in the community services category.

A graduate of McLaughlin Collegiate in Oshawa, she now teaches with the Durham District School Board. She has lobbied the government on behalf of the Canadian Hearing Society to make buildings more accessible for deaf people and the hard-of-hearing, is involved in her children's schools and volunteers. A three-time cancer survivor, she worked to develop Hearth Place and is currently president of the board.

In education, this year's Woman of Distinction is Margaret Greenley, of Oshawa, student services director at Durham College. Described by her boss, college president Gary Polonsky as a woman of "enormous energy, vision and empathy," she is best known for her work in helping college graduates find meaningful work.

Lise Raymond, of Nestleton, won in the health care category. A registered nurse practitioner for 15 years, she's lived in Durham since 1994. She has been actively involved in the region's francophone community and helped start Vision-Sante, a program aimed at promoting health awareness for unilingual French-speaking residents, especially women. She also volunteers as a counsellor for Native people with drug addictions.

The YWCA also presented Brock High School graduate Christine Lemery with the $8,000 Kay Buffet Scholarship, presented to young women who show leadership in school and the community and who require financial assistance to continue their post-secondary school education. Ms. Lemery is now a student at the University of Waterloo.
