THE FATE OF AZUMA;

Or, The South African Millionaire.

He stooped and kissed her hand as he told her, and something within seemed to mingle with the distant roar of traffic, and to wander away from her, carrying her life's blood with it, while her ears sang, and it seemed to her that she threw herself from the terrace.

When she opened her eyes, his arms were around her, and thought returned, thought insistent, interrogative, reproachful, yet because it travelled a distorted, warped imagination, still vile, tainted, like her life.

Then it was for her position alone, that he had married her for how else

She opened her eyes and stared at him dazed, the while an intense relief struggled with another feeling, a feeling of dismay that love still evaded her. Why had he not told her, was it because he wanted to hold it over her head? Or was it because of Azuma? The nobility, that, did not strike her, not yet, not yet.

"You knew," she repeated, "you knew."

"Yes, I knew everything." "The poor chap needed money I expect, and I gave it him, he has gone to Australia, you will never see him again. That chapter of your life is over and now, now, little one, we will be happy."

"You knew, and yet—then with something of the old daring insolence, "You knew, then why did you marry me?"

Was it possible that even now she did not understand? A species of despair took hold of him, a despair of ever reaching to the nobility of her mind which he still felt, hoped might be on a level with his own. He spoke briefly:

"Because I loved you."

The words doggedly pronounced, how sweet they were, how delicious. And yet something within whispered that it was not possible that he loved her still. The thought of her scorn, of the cruel cutting words she had so often uttered, of suspicions expressed, although they were not real ones, of his relations with Azuma, her disdain of the woman who had brought him luck, the way she had pretended to accept his wealth as a favor because it seemed the only thing he had to offer in return for the great position she offered him, for the name she had laid aside, for the old lineage, had pretended to look down on his race, his position, his want of social prestige, flirted with others, wringing his heart. Ah, he had loved her then, but now . . . And because words to-day had to be uttered in sincerity, and thoughts spoken aloud the mind could not contain, she finished hers aloud.

"And now you . . ."
He interrupted her.
"I have always loved you, I love you still, just the same, more perhaps, madly, passionately, for always."

Yes, it seemed to him that to-night for the first time he had reached her heart.

"Ah . . ."
She fell on his breast, and tears, the long pent up tears which came so rarely, fell now like summer rain, but they did not hurt her as those other tears had done. They were tears of joy, drops of the heart's dew—love.

And as he enfolded her in his arms, there seemed to pass before her the crowds whose company she had disdained to-night, what a senseless gibbering crowd it seemed, seeking pleasure and emotion and illicit love and counterfeit. What did it know, that rapid, congress of fools, of such emotions as this. Love, love untravestied, unrestrained by gossip and hints and knowledge of shame, love the dominating, the conquering, over-riding everything. Love, love, real love, cared for nothing but the object of its love. Ah, if the gods had been cruel, they had at least reserved for Lady Judith something which they rarely bestowed, the finest pearl of all, quite at the bottom of the well of truth.

"And I always said that I wanted to be loved, that if I were loved, I would be good," she murmured.

And as he drew her, with his arms around her, back into her room, and switched on the light, his foot struck against something on the floor. He stooped and picked it up.

"What is this?" he held it out to her, he had forgotten all about it.

Here in the light, he could see the radiance of her face on which love was shining through tears; the expression was still there, more emphasized than ever, the expression of the Madonna, but this time the agonized look of deprived maternity had almost vanished.

There was new joyousness in her voice as she took the bauble from him.

"That is what I gave Azuma, you see she won't keep it, she has thrown it back. Poor Azuma, to-morrow I will make her keep it. . . I will be so nice to her, so good to her. Ah, you don't know how good I am going to be."

She spoke like a forgiven child who is still dazzled by the wonder of being forgiven.

"Poor Azuma, I have never understood till to-night. I will have a long talk with her to-morrow. We both will."

But alas for resolves that are made late.

CHAPTER XXI.

But notwithstanding the renewed cheerfulness, more than that, the seeming intoxication of happiness which had come to him through Judith's absolute surrender of pride, (for Judith was like a bird just released from a cage in an exquisite forest), the incident of having found the jewel she had given to Azuma on the floor of his wife's bedroom had more significance for Adolphe than he would have told Judith.

"I don't advise you to pay any attention," he had told her, but he knew the South African races, who had spent years with Azuma as his only companion, knew that it was almost like a declaration of war, and that the very fact that she noticed that anything Azuma did had the power to wound or distress her, would have a fatal effect.

The Boers treated the Kaffirs shamefully, but we have made the mistake of treating them too well, forgetting the years that will have to intervene before they are on a level in mind with the white races. The Americans have understood this, and there are evidences of their wisdom every day. They are paying the price of too much severity in the days of slavery, but they pay a far heavier price every time they forget the racial line of demarcation. Gratitude is wanting in the African, he does not understand kindness unless it is meted out by one who has first shown strength. In Azuma the gratitude was for the act of rescue, because it had first been enhanced by the act of force, in striking the Boer. Gratitude in the form of gentleness alone, the winning of gratitude by love and tenderness, that is only understood by a higher civilized condition of the mind, unaccompanied by severity it evidences weakness to the negro mind.

It meant clearly that she would take no gifts from Judith, would not recognize her as in any way her mistress, and he as her husband, ought to punish Azuma. If he did so, he would not even own to himself what would be the result. The incident worried him a good deal, and the problem how exercised his mind of whether he could make some arrangement for her away from the house, the while something within him urged that if he did so ill luck would befall him. Yet with Judith's renewed tenderness, the power of Azuma to influence his fate seemed to him a thing which no longer needed consideration. What did he need now? Nothing but Judith. He had reached the very nether of her heart as it were, and that had been the crowning desire of his life. And the humility of Judith was touching.

Yes, she had been right when she had said that love, real love, which could overlook, forgive the past, the love of a man who did not care, because he loved her would make her good. Yes, in her gratitude to God, Judith renewed her mind, her very heart. Sometimes she would sit for hours on the terrace thinking over that scene, that night, and trying to hear again through imagination, his voice, his accent when he had said so doggedly, so brutally almost:

"Because I loved you." And her mind would go further back than that, with shame and remorse, remembering moments when she had been unkind, and yet he had never told her, never taunted her with her sullied girlhood. Oh, how wonderful, how wonderful to think that he had come straight from Hugh Glover who had told him the nauseous tale, and because his love was so great that he must needs add to it all that was best of chivalry and protection and tenderness and consolation, he had drawn her away to the conservatory—and said:

"I want to show you my heart." And although he had told her not to do so, from sheer love of him, because the gladness in her must convey itself to others, she went to Azuma and took her the little bracelet, and laughing and smiling had fastened it on her arm. "But she wouldn't smile," she told Adolphe, when he came back to luncheon, "she didn't thank me or anything, just stood there looking very sullen and I am sure that the moment my back was turned she took it off."

"I wish you hadn't given it her back," he told Judith, and she made a little face at him, a little face which he knew quite well meant, "I did it for you because she has been good to you, because she loves you and because I love everybody that you love."

A new chiasm was upon Lady Judith, the chiasm of a love for the whole world which transformed her, and something else too, something she was going to tell him that night which, while it brought a remembrance she would fain have been without, would yet bring joy, because it was his dearest wish. Life looked very bright just now, and the incident of Azuma did not trouble her, but it troubled Adolphe. The time had come when he must get rid of her and because only noble hearts can be grateful, and his was the noblest of hearts, because he knew that she loved him, he hated to send her away.

Yes, of late Azuma had grown to hate Lady Judith more and more, as she saw the increasing tenderness of Adolphe. He never came now, the Baas, to play to her or to consult her as he had been wont to. Instead he spent the evenings with his wife, or took her out. She could not grasp, poor untutored creature how every day their engagements increased, how the wealth of the African Croesus united to Lady Judith's name and position, (especially lately when the new security of her husband's reserved, unconditional protection, the release from the carking secret, had seemed to give her something of stability, of confidence, of poise, which had been wanting, while all London was at last taken into her confidence about the fact that she was devoted to Adolphe Lieb, and wanted nobody else), had enlarged the eddies of their responsibilities, their circle of acquaintances, that Lady Judith was now entering with new fervor into his schemes, and going where he wanted her to go, cultivating the friends he needed and gradually the foundations of the great power he had always felt his money would bring him.

They did not want her now, Azuma told herself, and at night she would read the pebbles and watch the sand falling into shapes and forms for herself, predicting sadness and separation from the beloved Baas, and to him sorrow and disaster.

Then at last, one night, he went to her on her terrace, just as he had done before, and her heart leaped just as Judith's had done on the anniversary of her wedding night.

He had found her squatting on the mat on the terrace gazing out on to the street, on to the lights below, her hand clasping her chin like the image of night itself. It must be sad for her this life, he said to himself, sad and lonely. After a time she would be happier in the Veldt.

He thought that he had arranged it all very cleverly as he stood there smoking. She would not know that it was his way of getting rid of her. Only he did not ask her to read the pebbles, and she noted the omission.

"We shall be going away in a few days," he began, "going away like everyone else because it is getting too hot." He paused a moment, and she turned her head.

"To Johannesburg you go?"
"No, not yet, we are going to travel about, to pay visits to friends, perhaps to Germany, and I want you, Azuma, to do something for me. I am sending Mr. Kendal." (Kendal was one of the secretaries who had been with him in the old days at Johannesburg and she liked him.) "I am sending Mr. Kendal to see after that Hjerdtfeldt contract, but he cannot do anything with Zambzi, you will have to do your best with him, you can manage him. I hear there are some people after it, and if we don't get it at once why we might as well let the Rhineling mine go."

He spoke in as business a tone as he could assume, and what he was telling her was real, he did not want to hurry up that contract, and he was sending Mr. Kendal to Johannesburg, but she could read his thoughts, this woman, although her back was partly turned towards him, although it was nearly dark. There was a moment's silence; then he broke it again.

"I can't help thinking that there is something at the back of it all, you'll find out. See Zeller and if necessary pay him."

Still silence, then she sprang up with that supple movement of hers, which brought her to her feet at once, by simply stretching her two arms forward. He had often admired the way she rose suddenly to her feet without bending her knees, and she stood there on the terrace before him against the glow of the great city, a bronze mute figure it seemed, for a few seconds. Then all of a sudden she burst out:

"Why the Baas send me away, that Lady Judy want me go away?"

She had always said "Lady Judy," never been able to pronounce the "th" and it had amused them both. Often in jest Adolphe would call her "Lady Judy," now to-night together with her words it grated, and he did not like the way she had said "that Lady Judy," but she often used words, without knowing their significance, and he restrained the irritation he felt.

"Lady Judith has nothing to do with it. I want you to see to this business for me. I am not sending you away Azuma, I cannot go to Johannesburg yet and no one can do that so well as you."

"If I go you never come to Johannesburg again," she replied doggedly. And Adolphe laughed.

LORD ROBERT CECIL.

Interesting Personality of Late Lord Salisbury's Son.

Of all the members of the new coalition Administration of Great Britain there are few more brilliant than Lord Robert Cecil. Indeed it was a matter of surprise that so able a man as Lord Robert should have been content with the Under Secretaryship of State for Foreign Affairs instead of insisting upon a seat in the Cabinet and the seals of a great department.

But in view of the delicate condition of the health of Sir Edward Grey, Lord Robert is in the ordinary nature of events bound to have much more work, responsibility, and power thrust upon him than ordinarily falls to the share of an Under Secretary of State and is certain to play a weighty role in the direction of the foreign policies of the British Empire.

Lord Robert has much in common with his father and namesake, the late Marquis of Salisbury, who for so

Like him, he was a younger son, and as is the case with so many of the English aristocracy, was compelled to work for a living. Lord Robert took to the law and made such a success of the bar that at the age of 42 he felt that he was warranted by the amount of money reaped through his lucrative practice virtually to forsake the latter and to embark upon a political career in the House of Commons.

A Free Trader.

The late Lord Salisbury was a strict adherent to England's old established policy of free trade and his sons Robert and Hugh have followed in his footsteps in this respect. Indeed, Lord Robert has been regarded as the leader of the free trade element of the Unionist party.

Lord Robert Cecil, who is married to Lady Eleanor Lambton, sister of the present Earl of Durham, and of Admiral of the Fleet Sir Hedworth Meux, has four brothers, who are all of them clever men and have made their mark, each of them in his own particular way. The eldest is, of course, the present Marquis of Salisbury, who filled the offices of Lord Privy Seal and Minister of Commerce in the last Unionist Cabinet.

When Lord Robert first took his seat in Parliament as member of the East Marylebone district of London in 1906 he found that his younger brother, Lord Hugh, had already acquired fame there by his gift of eloquent oratory. Lord Robert is inferior in this respect to Lord Hugh, but more lucid and above all more practical.

Rarely Laughs.

He soon won the regard and the respect of the House and even succeeded in dispelling to a great extent that prejudice on the part of the Liberals who had come to look upon the staff-craft of the Cecils much in the same way that an evangelical meeting would regard Jesuitism. Like the late Lord Salisbury, he has no particular graces of manner or gesture. He goes to and from his seat in the House of Commons with a kind of dignified lurch. In moments of excitement he will move his hands violently up and down as if he were using some huge hammer and his voice will rise to the verge of shrillness.

He rarely laughs, and as in the case of his father, any sense of humor that he may possess takes the form of satire and sarcasm. He is not good looking, has his father's remarkable stoop of the shoulders and with his thin, curved nose, his dark hair, receding from his pallid forehead, his grim, hawklike appearance, clean shaven face, his glistening eyes and ungainly gestures, presents a personality not easy to forget.

MUTINY ON THE GALLIPOLI PENINSULA

45 of the Ringleaders Arrested by the Germans and Taken to Constantinople in Chains

A despatch from London says: "Strained and increasingly bad relations between the German and Turkish army officers have led to a serious crisis. On quite indisputable authority a few days ago a quarrel among staff and other officers at the front in the Gallipoli Peninsula led to a mutiny of formidable dimensions against the Germans. The latter were forced to take the strongest measures to quell the insurrection, and with considerable difficulty arrested the ringleaders and some other officers involved. These numbered 45. They were sent in chains to Constantinople, where they would be shot, but the German commander heard rumored threats of revolt, and did not feel himself in a strong enough position to do so immediately. The arrests caused a great sensation throughout the ranks of the army, and tended to increase the very considerable indignation against the Germans, who now have few real friends even among the most prominent young Turks.

In spite of optimistic statements from Constantinople, the Turkish ammunition supplies are nearing exhaustion as the result of repeated attacks by the allied forces at the Dardanelles. Private advices received at Athens said that the German and Turkish diplomats have renewed their efforts to obtain consent of the Balkan States for the passage of munitions to Turkey.

Boatloads of wounded from the fighting on Gallipoli Peninsula continue to arrive at Constantinople. It is estimated that 120,000 Turkish wounded are now in the Constantinople hospitals.

A despatch from Galata says: "French and British aeroplanes have flown over Constantinople. They threw bombs on Galata, causing heavy casualties.

Galata, on the north side of the Golden Horn, near Seraglio Point, is Constantinople's largest suburb.

FRENCH WIN SEVERAL AERIAL COMBATS

Half a Dozen German Machines Forced to Descend in Damaged Condition

A despatch from Paris says: French aviators are reported to have distinguished themselves recently in several aerial combats with German machines. A French craft reconnoitering above Colmar was attacked by a German machine, which it forced to descend within the German lines in Alsace, evidently damaged by shots.

The same day two German planes were chased back from above French positions in Artois, while two French patrols attacked and apparently damaged another German aeroplane. An Albatross machine was forced to the ground in the same way on Wednesday.

A squadron of ten German aeroplanes which attempted a bomb attack on Toul and Nancy was forced to retreat by French machines, dropping the projectiles they carried upon open fields.

NEW OFFENSIVE AGAINST CALAIS

Movement of German Troops Through Belgium Continuous for Days.

A despatch from London says: The Daily Mail's correspondent at The Hague telegraphs that a prominent neutral citizen, who has just arrived from Brussels, says that the movement of German troops through Belgium to the western front has been constant for several days.

A significant order of the day predicting resumption by the Germans of a vigorous offensive in the west has been issued to the Teutonic armies in Flanders, according to the Amsterdam Telegraaf. An extract from this order, telegraphed by the Amsterdam correspondent of the Exchange Telegraph Company, follows: "Our work now is practically finished in the east and we are about to begin in the west. Peace is certain in October."

The French official communication chronicles the recapture through counter-attacks of part of the trenches lost in the Argonne, and the repulse of enemy attacks at other points. There was also some rather severe fighting in the Vosges, in which hand-grenades were used.

Albert Thomas, Under-Secretary of War in charge of munitions, tells the Petit Parisien that France's efforts to produce munitions are different in method, but equal in results, to those of England, which he recently viewed. The newspaper quotes him as follows: "We have an army which at the present moment is armed so as to withstand any shock, an army which on the other hand is capable of making a strong offensive. Its morale is good; that is to say, the army is prepared to remain as it is if necessary. "Every day our strength grows both in England and in France. Notwithstanding the formidable resources at the disposal of Germany, it is not possible that the resources of the allies will not assure them when the time is ripe for complete victory."

ITALY NEEDS MORE GRAIN.

12,000,000 Quintals to Be Bought in America.

A despatch from Rome says: The latest official reports regarding the harvest show that Italy needs 12,000,000 quintals more of grain for her consumption until next year. A quintal is approximately 220 pounds. Most of this grain, it is understood, will be purchased in America.

WORKMAN IN GERMANY PAYS MORE FOR FOOD.

A despatch from Amsterdam says: The official organ of the General Federation of Trades Unions of Germany states that as one result of the British blockade the average German workman's family last May had to expend 36.49 marks (about $9) weekly for food, as compared with 24.70 marks (about $6) in May of 1914.

345 FACTORIES ARE UNDER "CONTROL"

Excess of Employers' Profits Over Fixed Limit to be Paid Into the Imperial Exchequer

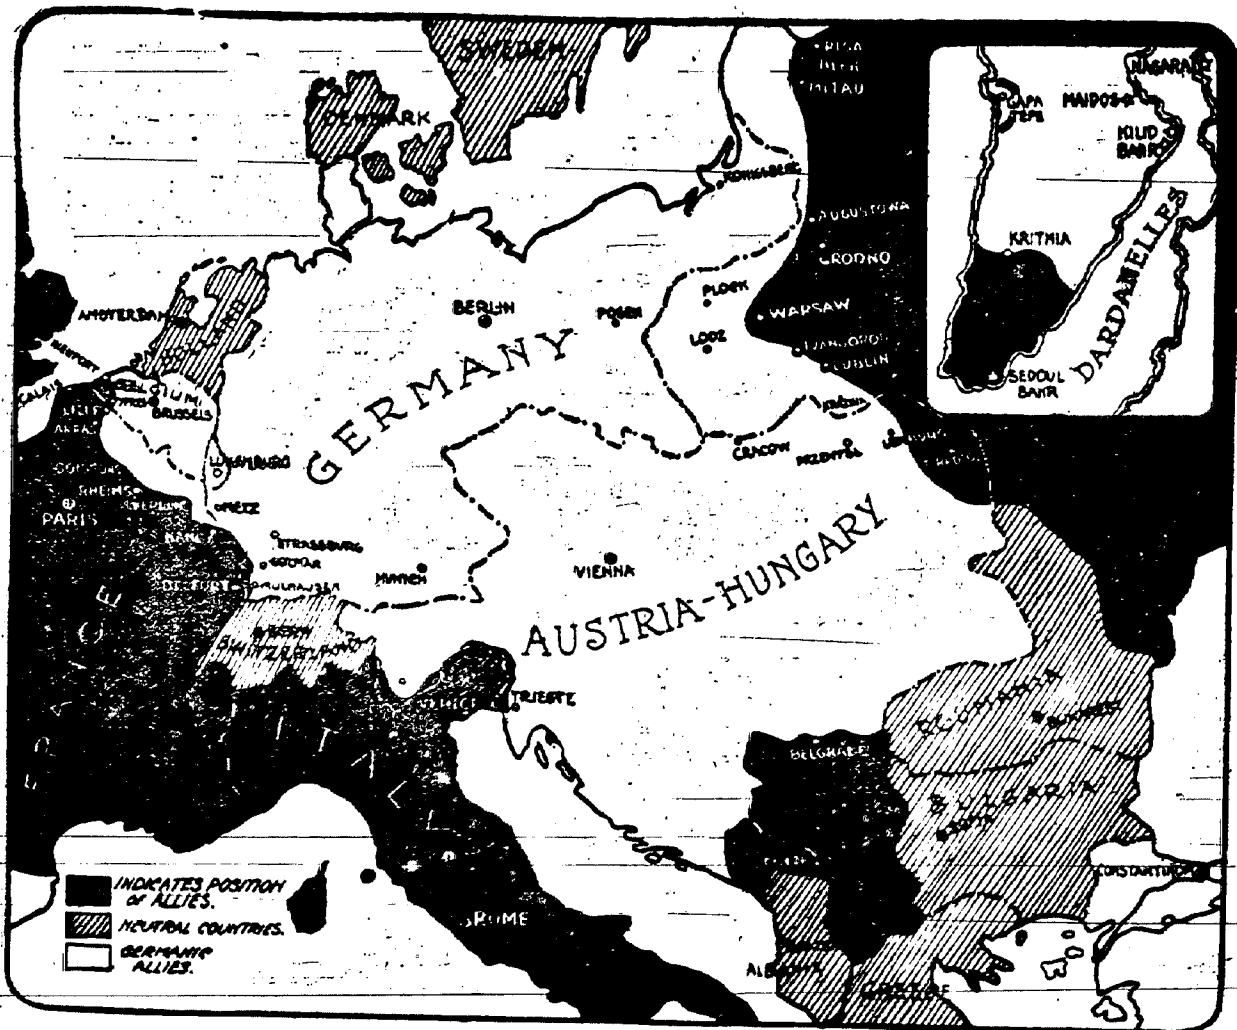

A despatch from London says: David Lloyd-George, Minister of Munitions, announces that 345 establishments have been declared "controlled establishments" under the Munitions of War Act. As a result of this control the profits of employers are limited. Any excess over such a limit becomes payable to the National Exchequer. "By this provision," says Mr. Lloyd-George, "Parliament has assured that sacrifices made by workmen are made for the nation as a whole and not for the advantage of individuals. On the other hand, during the period of the war, any rules or shop customs which may have the effect of limiting the output of munitions are suspended in controlled establishments."

Sir David Beatty Appointed Vice-Admiral

A despatch from London says: The Official Gazette announces that Sir David Beatty has been promoted to be a vice-admiral. Sir David Beatty during the present war commanded the British fleets which in August, 1914, sank four German warships off Heligoland and won a victory over a German squadron in the North Sea the following January. In this fight the German cruiser Bleucher was sent to the bottom. Vice-Admiral Beatty is only 45 years old, and the youngest officer ever promoted to the rank of a vice-admiral in the British navy.

EUROPE AFTER FIRST YEAR OF THE GREAT WAR

The black portions indicate the territory held by the Allied Powers; the white, territory occupied by Germany or her allies, and the shaded portions, the territory of the neutral nations. The broken lines show the boundaries before the war and serve to show the areas of the enemy's country held by the several belligerents. Germany holds nearly all Belgium and the northeast section of France, while with her ally she has taken a considerable area in Russian Poland. On the other hand, France has won a part of Alsace; Italy has captured a fringe of Austria-Hungary along the frontier; Russia still holds no account of the former German colonies which have been conquered by, or have surrendered to, the British or French forces.

WAR SUPPLIES TO THE ALLIES

President Wilson Tells Austria That Shipments Will Not Be Restricted.

A despatch from Washington says: Austro-Hungary and Germany now know officially that there is no hope of the United States discontinuing or even restricting shipments of war supplies to the allies.

This Teutonic Governments have learned from the note which the State Department has sent to Austria and which has been made public. This communication in the form of a reply to the Vienna protest against the business being done by Americans in war munitions sets forth the attitude of this Government clearly and firmly. Austria is notified flatly that this Government will not even consider acceding to her request. So strong is the stand taken by the Washington Government that this note not only will probably end the diplomatic exchanges on the subject, but will operate as a distinct check upon sentiment developing in this country in favor of an embargo. While President Wilson in this note, as in all others to European Governments on the war issues, takes his stand firmly upon the principles involved and upon usage of nations, he introduces another feature which by many is regarded as the most striking in the note: The President bases his refusal to consider the Austrian suggestion on the practical grounds of its effect upon the ability of the United States to meet a foe in the event of war.

The Government tells Austria that it has been the policy of the United States from the founding of the Republic not to maintain in time of peace a large military establishment or stores of arms and ammunition, that the United States has in fact always depended upon the right and power to purchase arms and ammunition from neutral nations in case of foreign attack.

GERMANS ARE DROWNED IN EFFORT TO ESCAPE

A despatch to Christiania says: Twenty-five members of the crew of the German converted cruiser Berlin, interned at Trondhjem last November, attempted to escape by swimming across the Trondhjem fjord, but they were observed by a guard and caught. All were provided with bundles of civilian clothing, money and knives. Several were drowned.

Three German citizens have been sentenced to terms of imprisonment for attempting to smuggle copper into Germany.

The Berlin, which carried a crew of 450 men, entered the Norwegian port of Trondhjem on Nov. 17, to escape British warships after attempting to escape from the North Sea to act as a commerce raider in the Atlantic.

Green is an ill-becoming color for brunettes to wear.

AN ATTEMPT TO RELIEVE THE TURKS

Osrova Violently Bombarded, but the Attempted Landing is Successfully Repulsed

A despatch from London says: The Daily Mail's correspondent at Bucharest reports that the Austrians violently bombarded the Serbians at Osrova, but that an attempt by the Hungarians to land at Ogradena was unsuccessful. In this connection it is recalled that it is generally reported that 100,000 Germans and Austrians and a large number of guns have been concentrated near Osrova with the intention, it is assumed, of cutting their way through Serbia and going to the relief of the Turks.

CROWN PRINCE AGAIN REPULSED

Fruitless Attacks Result in Heavy Losses to His Force.

A despatch from Paris says: The Germans have evidently received large reinforcements in Belgium, and attempted to assume the offensive at Nieuport. They were, however, repulsed by the French infantry fire, and the attack was abandoned.

The German Crown Prince continues his attempts to pierce the French line. He has had a few local successes, but the losses he has sustained in the series of attacks have been very heavy.

The present position at Hill 60, which the British military authorities recently admitted had lapsed back into German possession, is peculiar and of great interest.

The hill is really nothing but a knoll of gently rising ground that forms the end of the Klein-Zillebeke ridge. The German trenches run in a double tier along the crest and upper slope, while the British trenches form an irregular line along the edge of the lower slope. The Germans are at the top of the hill, while the British are a little way up the side of it.

The whole face of the hill presents a picture of the wildest confusion. Everywhere are huge craters, the result of mine explosions on the night of the British attack. Torn and gaping sandbags are scattered in profusion; broken rifles, odds and ends of equipment of all kinds, smashed barbed wire, and a mass of other debris lie in bewildering variety down the hillside, the whole half hidden in the long grass that has sprung up between the trenches.

The trenches twist and wind in a remarkable manner. At one point there is an old communication trench running from the British lines straight into the heart of the German position, and down this two barricades have been erected, one on the English side and one on the German side. Here the opposing forces came within six yards of each other. Between the rival barricades there stretches a short patch of ground shut in on either hand by the crumbling walls of the old trench.

TEN YEARS METED OUT TO ESSEX DYNAMITE

A despatch from Windsor says: William Laffer, of Detroit, has been sentenced to ten years' imprisonment in Kingston Penitentiary for causing an explosion in the Peabody overall factory here a few weeks ago and for conspiracy to wreck the Windsor Armory. At the time of the explosion the factory was turning out supplies for soldiers.

LLOYD GEORGE ENLISTS HELP OF SCIENTISTS.

A despatch from London says: That he may avail himself of all the latest discoveries in appliances for the manufacture of munitions of war, David Lloyd George, the Munitions Minister, has formed a "munitions invention branch" of his department. In this department he will be assisted by twenty-five scientists and engineering experts.

A tourist without money is a tramp and a tramp with money is a tourist. In Germany a mile is four times as long as in England.

Author of Song of Hate Sorry He Wrote It

A despatch from Amsterdam says: Even Ernst Lissauer appears to be becoming ashamed of the song of hate. He writes to the Berlin Tageblatt saying he agrees with its view that the song is not intended for the young, and has often advised against its publication in school books. "The song of hate," he writes, "was written as the result of a passionate impulse in the first week of the war, when the impression created by England's declaration of war was fresh. The song of hate is a political poem directed not against individual Englishmen, but collectively against the English will to destruction which threatens Germany. In the excitement of those days my feelings were deeply stirred by this. Whether these feelings can continue with the cool consideration of practical politics is another question."

NOTES AND COMMENTS

The laws of our land provide that the Sabbath Day be observed as a day of rest, and makes it an offence to perform any unnecessary labor on that day. There are certain forms of labor that are permissible under the law, such as the delivery of milk, the running of railway trains and other forms of work that are considered work of necessity. But in the farming community work in the fields is not considered by the law as a work of necessity. One of the police magistrates of Toronto, stated a few days ago that if a farmer were brought before him, charged with violating the laws of the land by working in his harvest fields on Sunday, he would not think for a moment to convict him. He thinks that a man would be perfectly justified in harvesting his grain on a Sunday in such weather as we have had during the past month. There are times when Sunday is the only day in week when grain is fit to be harvested. When such is the case it should not be considered a great crime to try to save property on that day. If a building is on fire on Sunday, there is not a person who would think it wrong to make a strenuous effort to save it or its contents. Or if a house is in danger of destruction by a flood any means taken to save it would be considered justifiable. We cannot see much difference in saving a house threatened with destruction by fire or flood on the Sabbath and saving wheat or any other kind of grain when Sunday is the only day on which it can be saved. There are many people who are very narrow-minded in respect to the Sabbath. We have known people in sugar-making time to go through the sugar bush on Monday morning and empty out all the sap that had flowed on Sunday. Others consider it an awful offence to lighten up one's countenance with a smile on the Lord's Day. The Sabbath was made for man and not man for the Sabbath. The physical, intellectual and spiritual nature of man is such that proper development requires a proper period of rest. Not only should a person have so many hours of sleep every day, but actual experience has shown that a man can accomplish more in a year if he rests one day in seven. His whole being, physical, spiritual and intellectual, is benefited by such a rest. If the Sabbath Day were not established by law, the mass of the people would not enjoy its benefits, and it is perfectly right that the laws of the land compel its observance. But reason should admit that certain forms of labor are works of necessity, such as the saving of property, which can not be saved on any other day.

WHITBY

A number of city people were here during the past week purchasing property.

At their meeting on Monday night, the council decided to construct additional cement sidewalks, and awarded the contract to Mr. Underwood.

At a meeting of the Women's War League it was decided to ask the farmer's wives to contribute each two lbs. of dried apples for the soldiers at the front.

Owing to the dampness of the straw R. J. Fleming is threshing his wheat outside instead of having the straw cut and blown into the mows as was intended.

In our last issue it was stated that R. N. Bassett had sold his present store and had moved into new premises. The change, we are informed, will not take place until spring.

R. J. Fleming is very optimistic in regard to the benefits to be derived from the building of the proposed good roads. He thinks it will do more towards developing this part of the country than the electric railway which is in course of construction. Although the heaviest tax-payer in Pickering township he is one of the most enthusiastic supporters of the scheme.

THE CHARM OF MOTHERHOOD

Enhanced By Perfect Physical Health.

The experience of Motherhood is a trying one to most women and marks distinctly an epoch in their lives. Not one woman in a hundred is prepared or understands how to properly care for herself. Of course nearly every woman nowadays has medical treatment at such times, but many approach the experience with an organism unfitted for the trial of strength, and when it is over her system has received a shock from which it is hard to recover. Following right upon this comes the nervous strain of caring for the child, and a distinct change in the mother results.

There is nothing more charming than a happy and healthy mother of children, and indeed child-birth under the right conditions need be no hazard to health or beauty. The unexplainable thing is that, with all the evidence of shattered nerves and broken health resulting from an unprepared condition, and with ample time in which to prepare, women will persist in going blindly to the trial.

Every woman at this time should rely upon Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, a most valuable tonic and invigorator of the female organism.

In many homes once childless there are now children because of the fact that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound makes women normal, healthy and strong.

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicines Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

D. Morgan and Geo. Gerow were at Oshawa on Tuesday seeing after a county bridge destroyed by flood.

OBSTINATE INDIGESTION CAN BE CURED

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills Go
the Trouble.

No trouble causes more widespread suffering and discomfort than indigestion. The ailment takes various forms. Some victims are ravenous for food; others turn sick at the sight of meals; but as a rule every meal is followed by intense pains in the chest, heartburn, sick headache and often nausea. Indigestion assumes an obstinate form because ordinary medicines only subdue its symptoms—but do not cure. So-called pre-digested foods only make the digestion more sluggish, and ultimately make the trouble take a chronic form.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills cure indigestion because they go right to the root of the trouble. They make new, rich blood, which so strengthens the system that the stomach does its own work and digests the food in a natural way. Many a terrible sufferer from indigestion has found a permanent cure through a fair use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Among them is Mrs. H. Carmern, Locke Street North, Hamilton, Ont., who says:—"Dr. Williams' Pink Pills not only gave me new health, but new life. For five years I was a great sufferer, was almost constantly doctoring, and spent a great deal of money with absolutely no result. My stomach was in such a dreadful condition that frequently it would not retain nourishment of any kind. When I ate I suffered terrible pains, a fluttering of the heart, and often a feeling of nausea. In addition to this I was in a very anæmic condition, and felt as if I was lingering between life and death. One day while sitting in the park a lady got into conversation with me, and I told her my trouble. She asked me if I had tried Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, saying that they had been a great benefit to her daughter. When I went home I decided to try this medicine. I soon found the pills were helping me, and continued taking them for several months, when I was restored to better health than I had enjoyed for years, and I have since been the picture of health. I hope my experience may be the means of pointing to others the way to health."

You can get these pills through any medicine dealer or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

THE GERMAN LIAR AGAIN.

Untruths Told About Britain to Deceive German People.

The most amazing untruths concerning Great Britain are daily circulated in Berlin for the purpose of deceiving the German public into the belief that Great Britain is in a state of panic. Here are a few of these gems which make up in humor what they lack in veracity:

"Sir John Jellicoe is to be tried for incapacity."

"The organ of the Labor Party demands that the whole Cabinet shall be impeached for participation in the war."

"The Indian troops in France were told before leaving India that they were being taken to Europe for exhibition purposes."

"Half of London is burnt down, and Zeppelins are always hovering over it. Plymouth has also been destroyed by fire, caused by bombs from the air."

"Mr. Asquith has fled from England, and is hiding in Ireland."

"The citizens of London now hurry hither and thither like scared mice because their battalions of football-kicking louts are melting away before the fire of the German artillery."

"Instead of blowing their victims from the mouths of their guns as they did in the Indian Mutiny, the British now employ the truly humane and gentle acting dum-dum bullets, with the approval of Lord Kitchener."

"The French Government pays for the support of British troops, so that each man draws on a day on which there is no fighting four francs, while on each fighting day he is entitled to eight francs. The British are also completely clothed and fed by the French."

"The deeds of the German fleet are already causing the Lords of the Admiralty sleepless nights while on board the British ships fearful apprehension lurks in every corner."

"Come into the army," says the British recruiting sergeant to the youths. "You shall have a villa in Rome, a bungalow on the Mediterranean, and in two months you shall be King of the Belgians."

"Snug & raw was I ere I saw war & guns" spells the same both backwards and forwards.

It has been said that the only two words in the English language with the vowels in order are "abstemious" and "facetious"; but others could probably be found.

SMART CLOTHES FOR THE YOUNG GIRL.

The plaited skirt for the young girl is proving a great success, if we may take the great number seen at the summer resorts as a criterion. When the whole dress, shirtwaist and skirt, is made in plaited effect, the result is very pleasing indeed. This dress, Ladies' Home Journal Pattern No. 8988, has a raised waistline, and consists of a waist opening in front with yoke finished with a turn-down collar, full-length sleeves with open cuffs, and a fitted lining, a seven-gore skirt, perforated for deep hem facing. The pattern cuts in size 14, 16, 18 and 20 years, requiring in size 16, 11½ yards 36-inch material.

Ladies' Home Journal Pattern No. 8980 is a Ladies' and Misses' Peplum Waist, opening in front with roll collar or Quaker collar and full-length or shorter sleeves, and a circular peplum. The pattern cuts in size 32 to 44 inches bust measure. Size 36 requires 3¾ yards 36-inch material.

Pattern No. 8981 is a Misses' One-Piece Skirt, gathered to a three-piece yoke, with slightly raised waistline. Suitable for flouncing. The pattern cuts in sizes 14, 16, 18 and 20 years. Size 16 requires 3¾ yards 36-inch material.

Patterns, 15 cents each, can be purchased at your local Ladies' Home Journal Pattern dealer, or from The Home Pattern Company, 183-A George Street, Toronto.

About the Household

Grandmother's Recipes.

Here are a few of good old-fashioned combinations, some pet recipes straight from grandmother's handwritten book:

Spiced Plums.—Boil ¼ gallon of plums five minutes. Pour off water and add three pounds of sugar, one teaspoonful each of cloves, allspice and cinnamon (ground) and one pint vinegar. Boil half hour, stirring constantly. Put in jars and seal at once.

Pear Conserve.—Chop four pounds pears, four lemons (rind and pulp), ½ pound crystallized ginger. To this chopped mixture add four pounds of sugar. Boil three to four hours until desired thickness is obtained.

Pineapple Honey.—Peel and cut eyes from three pineapples. Cut in pieces, taking out hard centre. Run through grinder. Add as much water as you have pineapple after grinding and as much sugar as pineapple and water together. Boil about ½ hour or until desired consistency is obtained.

Grape Conserve.—Three pints grapes, washed and picked off stems; three pints sugar, one pint water, one cup English walnuts, ½ pound raisins. Press pulp of grape from skin, beat pulp until soft. Run through colander and put back in kettle with the skins, water and sugar and two oranges sliced thin. Cook until done (one hour).

Jim-Jam.—Five pounds currants, 1½ pounds seeded raisins, juice and rind of two oranges. Wash currants, nearly cover with water, and cook until soft. Strain through jelly bag. Put raisins through grinder. Grate rind and squeeze juice out of grapes. Put all together, taking cup for cup of mixture and sugar. Cook till the consistency of jelly.

Preserved Watermelon Rind.—Seven pounds rind, 3½ pounds sugar, 1 quart vinegar, ½ ounce white-ginger, cloves and cinnamon to taste. Take the thickest rinds and pare off the hard green covering, slice and drain in colander over night. In the morning place in a strong brine, changing every three days; in the last brine put in a little alum to make rinds hard. Make the syrup and when hot put in rinds; cook 10 minutes, remove and cook the syrup 15 minutes. Pour over rinds. Can and use after standing two weeks.

Tomato Sauce.—One peck ripe tomatoes, 6 onions, 3 stalks celery, 3 red mangoes. Chop fine. Mix well with one cup of salt and put in thin sack to drain over night. Next day take 2 pounds brown sugar, 5 cups strong vinegar, 1 tablespoonful mustard seed. Let this come to a boil, then set aside to cool. Pour over above mixture and put in jars.

Menus for Children.

Some suggestions for menus and foods allowable after 30 months are:

Menu 1.—Beef broth with vermicelli, bran or wholemeal bread and the best butter obtainable, lightly broiled lamb chop, minced and seasoned with salt; spinach, boiled tender, and mashed through a puree sieve, served plain or with a spoonful of cream or broth; baked potato with salt; orange tapioca for dessert and a bit of fruit juice to drink.

Menu 2.—Chicken broth with rice, minced broiled tenderloin steak with salt (no butter on it), spaghetti, creamed, brown bread and butter, asparagus tips or stewed celery with hot cream sauce; cup custard for dessert.

Menu 3.—Mutton broth, the white meat of chicken cut into very small pieces, macaroni in hot milk, cauliflower or spinach, mashed and seasoned with salt and cream; bread and butter; orange float for dessert (made with gelatin).

Menu 4.—Beef tea, stewed squab, boiled or steamed rice, bread and butter, puree of Bermuda or Texas onion, puree of Bermuda or Texas onions, stewed very soft in milk; junket with egg for dessert.

Menu 6.—Strained vegetable soup, minced broiled mutton chop, rejecting all fat; baked potato, apple sauce, bread and butter; junket and cream for dessert.

Menu 7.—Beef broth, creamed or broiled fish (watch that it has no bones), boiled macaroni with milk, cooked very soft and creamy; cooked asparagus tips, also very soft; gelatin with whipped cream for dessert.

Useful Hints.

Iron rust stains may be removed from goods by using sour milk. To cleanse hands from vegetable stains, rub with a slice of raw potato.

To clean out flour barrel use a child's small broom; the long-handled kind.

To prevent cream from spotting table linen, dip linen in cold water before washing.

Press mohair with a very moderate iron. Press silk between two pieces of tissue paper.

Porch chairs of wicker or reed can be cleansed with soapsuds and a scrubbing brush and then can be shellbacked.

Icing for a cake can be colored a beautiful pink with a small quantity of beet juice. It is inexpensive and absolutely pure.

Linen that has become yellow may be bleached snow white if soaked in buttermilk for a short time—rinse and hang in sun.

Cucumbers make a delicious vegetable when stewed and served with a white sauce, or seasoned with butter, salt and pepper and served on toast.

When one rips out threads they wish they had three hands. Use a steel crochet hook and the work is easily done. Pull out bastings the same way.

To clear a house of roaches equal quantities of sugar and pulverized borax is recommended. Spread where the insects congregate the most.

Next time you bake beans add a diced carrot, a couple of tomatoes cut fine, and one small onion, browned in pork fat, and see what a delicious dish you have.

To remove mildew soak article in sour milk and lay in the sun. Or use chloride of lime made in proportion of a teaspoonful of lime to a quart of water.

Cream of tomato soup is not apt to curdle if a teaspoonful of cornstarch with a pinch of soda is mixed in the cream before it is added to the tomato mixture.

If a crust of bread toasted till nearly black be put into the water where greens are boiling it will prevent the disagreeable smell that arises when they are cooking.

If the wall is so soft that it will not hold a picture nail, mix a little plaster of paris and water; enlarge the hole and fill with the plaster and in a minute insert the nail and let it dry.

All the trials and tribulations caused when trying to sew the bows on one's pumps may be avoided if a few curved surgical needles are added to the sewing basket. Purchase at any drug store.

When you must go to the dentist's carry your prettiest boudoir cap and don it before you get into the chair; and when the ordeal is over you will find your hair in as good order as when you went in.

MOST DANGEROUS SPY.

Britain Departs Beauty Specialist Who Was a Spy.

Some of the most thrilling chapters in the history of the world's wars are those in which women have played a conspicuous part.

Mme. Bertha Trost, declared by British officials to be the most dangerous spy in the world, has just been deported from England as a German spy. For thirty years, according to the Scotland Yard officials who have been investigating her career, she has lived in England in expensive apartments that were far beyond her visible income.

During most of that period she operated an exclusive little beauty parlor that served rather to place her in touch with titled English women than increase her revenue. As months went on influential women fell deeper and deeper into her debt. Although Mme. Trost never demanded payment, she revealed an insatiable curiosity—a curiosity that dealt largely with affairs of State. The women who had revealed their physical ailments to Mme. Trost feared to refuse and—Well, Mme. Trost is charged with obtaining any information she desired.

Long before the war, say the English, Germany employed hundreds of feminine spies—beautiful society women, in many cases. These women have played important parts in the present campaign.

Here is a typical case as cited in London: By accident a woman handed a sentry the very note that she was to have given to the Germans, in mistake for the permit that she had to show in order to cross the bridge between Varangville and St. Nicholas. She was charged before a court of war and later executed.

Another woman dropped a letter, which read: "Hurry up; the Twentieth Corps arrives this evening." She dropped it at the gates of Nancy, and was straightway arrested. During the battle of the Aisne a woman was one night discovered signaling from a window to the Germans by means of an electric torch.

Attached to the garrison at Posen was a young officer named Schorvender, who was very poor. He was deeply in love with a girl named Ida Mullerthal, but, owing to his poverty, the prospect of their getting married was very remote. The lovers' trouble was known to a Russian secret agent, who approached the lieutenant and offered him $25,000 for a plan of the fortress of Posen. Dazzled by this offer, the lieutenant agreed, but he found it difficult to carry out his task. His sweetheart then suggested a cunning way out of the difficulty. "You shall tattoo a plan of the fortress on my back," she said. "I shall easily be able to travel to Russia with it without being discovered."

They carried out their fantastic idea successfully, but the silly extravagance in which the newly-wedded couple indulged after the girl returned to Posen aroused suspicion, and they were both arrested.

The greatest number of combatant British soldiers in the Crimea at any one time was 70,000.

A UNIVERSAL FOOD

Following Nature's Footsteps.

"I have a boy, two years old, weighing forty pounds and in perfect health who has been raised on Grape-Nuts and milk.

"This is an ideal food and evidently furnishes the elements necessary for a baby as well as for adults. We have used Grape-Nuts in large quantities and greatly to our advantage."

One advantage about Grape-Nuts food is that it is partially pre-digested in the process of manufacture. The starch contained in the wheat and barley is transformed into a form of sugar by the same method as this process is carried out in the human body; that is, by the use of moisture and long exposure to moderate warmth, which grows the diastase in the grains, and with long baking makes the remarkable change from starch to sugar.

Therefore, the most delicate stomach can handle Grape-Nuts and the food is quickly absorbed into the blood and tissue, certain parts of it going directly to building and nourishing both body and brain. "There's a Reason."

BUMPER CROP ASSURED.

Report Just Issued Indicates Record Yield.

Given normal weather until harvest, the yield of grain per acre along the 5,000 miles of the Canadian Northern Railway in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta is almost certain to average high according to a consolidated report from its agents which has just been received. This gives an estimated average for wheat of 24 bushels; oats 54; and barley 37 to the acre.

In each case, where the agents give a range, such as 25 to 30 in their estimates, the Canadian Northern adopt the lower figure, so that the average may be regarded as conservative. Officers of the company said that had a middle course been followed, the result in all probability would have been 27 or 28 bushels of wheat to the acre. When comparison is made with the figures of the North West Grain Dealer's Association for the average wheat yields in Western Canada for the last five years, the remarkable character of the prospective showing along C. N. R. lines this year is apparent. The figures referred to are: 1910, 12.9; 1911, 13.2; 1912, 18.6; 1913, 17.0; and last year 12.7 bushels to the acre.

The Canadian Northern average for wheat is compiled from reports from 171 stations between Port Arthur and the Rocky Mountains, the International Boundary line and the most northerly areas now served by its lines. In the Emmerson District in Manitoba the estimates run as high as 30 bushels to the acre, and in Rapid City District as high as 32. Dauphin reports 25; Portage la Prairie 26; Rosburn 30; and the Swan River District up to 35. Along the main line in Saskatchewan the reports from the Humboldt District run up to 33 bushels to the acre, and estimates up to 30 bushels comes from the North Battleford section. Northwest of that city, Meota, reports 28 to 30 bushels. East of Prince Albert in Saskatchewan on the northern line, Melford estimates are up to 30 bushels. The Saskatoon section estimates go as high as 35, while the Kindersley division, southwesterly towards the Alberta boundary, are estimated at 35 bushels to the acre. The De Lisle division in approximately the same area reports up to 40 bushels to the acre. In Alberta, the Hanna section, in the south and the Athabasca in the north, estimate the yield up to 40 bushels per acre. The Edmonton District forecast runs as high as 35, and Vermilion to 30. In Central Alberta and Battle River District prospects are given as high as 35. In only a few instances does the estimate fall below 20 bushels, and those statements are widely separated. The estimates for oats is derived from the statements of 159 stations and that for barley from 126.

The highest forecast for oats comes from the Elrose District in Saskatchewan. There the expectation is for 100 bushels to the acre. Next is the report from the Hanna District at 90 bushels. The lowest of all is 20 to 30 bushels. In Barley the highest estimate comes from Ardara in the De Lisle District and Dinsmore in Elrose District, each estimating 60 bushels to the acre. The lowest is 15 bushels. Strangely enough in each case where low averages are given, the next station reports an expectation for yields of excellent quantity.

Telegraphic advices received yesterday by the Canadian Northern from the Departments of Agriculture of Saskatchewan and Alberta indicate that warm weather is the rule throughout both provinces. That from Saskatchewan reads:

"The special weekly report on crop conditions based on telegrams received from all parts of the Province is issued to-day by the Department of Agriculture. In the summary of district by mail for convenience of those seeking harvest work will be found the average dates on which cutting will be general but the 21st of August should see the binders busy throughout the Province. From the Southwest exceptionally good reports have come in and the wheat heads are stated to be larger than usual. No further damage by hail is reported and in those districts where hay can be obtained a satisfactory supply of good hay is being saved. Hot weather is now general throughout the Province."

From Alberta the information is: "Southern District weather clear and warm, all grain growing rapidly, harvest operations commenced and will be general next week. Central District warm weather, all grain ripening fast, barley ready in some localities but harvest general in ten days. Northern District weather very warm, slight damage by hail, all crops maturing fast, barley will be ready early next week."

Letting Well Enough Alone.

"Madam," said a doctor one day to the mother of a sweet, healthy babe, "the ladies have deputed me to inquire what you do to have such a happy, uniform good child?" The mother mused for a moment over the strangeness of the question, and then replied, simply and beautifully: "Why, God has given me a healthy child, and I let it alone."

They Were Sweethearts.

A chair built for one held them both, and yet there was room to spare. As she snuggled to him she asked pleadingly, "Jack, do you love me better than anyone else in the world?" "Of course I do," said the young man, promptly. "And will you promise always to do anything you can to please me?" "Certainly, little girl!" "And you will never, never be cross with me?" "Darling, as if I could be," protested the young man, wondering what on earth this was leading up to. "And whatever I ask you to do, will you do it?" "Yes, sweetheart, but—" "Then,"—her sweet voice faltered—"will you burn that horrid red necktie you wear on Sundays?"
