Thomas Dixon, who resides in Markham Township, met with a very serious accident on Thursday afternoon last. He was in a car driven by Wilfred Hooper of Little Britain, and were driving on the highway at Prospect Corners, north of Myrtle.

When they met a large Buick car, driven by Lloyd Blum, of Milwaukee who had three companions with him. In turning a sharp curve the Buick swung over to the wrong side of the road, colliding with Mr. Hooper's car, which was damaged beyond repair. Mr. Hooper was thrown out of the left front door and under the car as it bounded along the road, but was only slightly injured. Mr. Dixon, however, sustained very severe injuries when he was crumpled up in front of the car. He was rushed to the Port Perry Hospital, where an examination revealed internal injuries from which he may not recover. The four Americans are held by the Port Perry police to await the outcome of the accident. They were unable to furnish the $5,000 bail fixed by the Magistrate.

The Gringo Privateer

By PETER B. KYNE

SYNOPSIS

Kenneth Burney, adventurer and one-time gentleman, comes to Bradley Bardin, king of the cattle-country, for a job. Burney has had a fight with Martin Bruce, a rival cattle owner, who has been stealing the king's stock, aided by Miguel Gallegos, a Mexican bandit. The king, liking young Burney's style, offers him the job of getting the cattle-thieves.

CHAPTER III.

Mr. Burney's handsome face puckered in distress. "Oh, no, sir," he confessed. "I haven't even had a desire to kill one. That is, if you speak in a professional sense. As a soldier I imagine that in the course of three years of active service I accounted for my share."

The king grimaced disgustedly. "Then why the devil are you applying to me for a job that requires a professional and a specialist?" he demanded truculently.

"Your pardon, senor. I have not applied for the job. I do, however, apply for a job as a rider in the employ of El Ranchito, because it has seemed to me that what you require here is an unusually . . . er . . . hardy crew that will be loyal to the payroll, and you might start your recruiting with me. Of course I am not insensible to the probability that he most loyal and devoted of the crew might come under the eye of Your Majesty and get knighted. I am not, however, a professional killer; I am not hiring out as such, even in the present extremely low state of my finances, nor shall I ever hire out as such. I shall always, I trust, remember that I am a gentleman and leave rough, rude brawling to those who have indulged in it since boyhood and think it manly."

His Majesty murmured in a low voice something just a trifle coarse. "I'm disappointed," he confessed. "I had a hunch you were just a gift, and if you would guarantee to rid me of Martin Bruce and Miguel Gallegos there is no doubt but that you would be knighted."

"It's not well to judge men nastily, sir," the young man assured him. "Precipitate men are not apt to comb gray hairs."

The king pounded his library table. "What I require, young man," he said, "is a general manager with the guts of a bear."

"Ever think of trying to one with the cunning of a fox, sir?"

The king stared at him. "How do you do, Mr. Fox?"

"You flatter me, sir."

"I'll take a chance on you, young fellow. Tomorrow you'll take your entrance examination and if you pass it, you go on the Bardin payroll. Once you're there I'll have my eye on you. Know what day it is tomorrow?"

"The Fourth of July, sir."

"You bet. And there's a barbecue and rodeo for the whole country-side here tomorrow. Can you ride?"

Ken Burney shrugged. "My paco," he murmured deprecatingly. Evidently all of his Castilian blood had not been bred out of him.

"Well, if you want that job you'll ride for it."

His guest bowed. "The king's request is always tantamount to an order."

"You quit calling me king and Your Majesty, will you? Why do you do that?"

"Because everybody else in this country does."

"I don't believe it. I've never been called such names to my face heretofore."

"Everybody's afraid to. But then you've got so much money and land and cattle you're a personage and entitled to a courtesy title. And I never say anything behind a man's back that I will not say to his face."

Whatever reply the king purposed making to this semi-impertinent statement remained unspoken, for Ken Burney saw him glance toward the door, saw his fierce glance soften and a smile of winning tenderness light up his rugged old face. Instantly Burney stood erect, turned and found himself facing a girl who stood hesitant in the doorway.

"Come in, my dear," the king entreated. Burney saw the girl's glance rest for an instant on his chaps and sombrero lying on the divan; then her diffidence disappeared and she advanced to her father's side without paying the slightest attention to his visitor.

"Thinks I'm just one of the old man's riders," Burney decided. "Wonder if the king will introduce me. By James, she's as beautiful as an army with banners."

The king did. "This young man, Muriel," he announced, "is Kenneth Burney, so, of an old cattleman friend of mine in California. Mr. Burney, this is my daughter, Muriel. Mr. Burney is dining with us tonight, Muriel."

Miss Muriel favored the young man with a bright smile and a reserved nod. "I see you're riding through, Mr. Burney."

"Oh, no," he corrected her. "Tomorrow I'm going to work for your father as a top cowhand."

"Maybe," the king corrected him enigmatically. "Mr. Burney," he explained to the girl, "is a drug store cowboy and before he goes to work for me has to pass an entrance examination. He'll ride Geronimo tomorrow, bulldog a big, peevish steer and rope a couple of calves to prove his social standing."

The butler came in to announce dinner and, to the amazement of the king, Mr. Burney gallantly offered his arm to Miss Muriel, who seemed undecided whether to accept it or not. In all her life none of her father's cowhands had ever been so bold.

"Oh, take it, take it," the king ordered. "He's used to high society. It comes natural to him, the impertinent pup."

"He's not an impertinent pup," Muriel defended, and accepted the proffered arm.

Arrived in the dining room, the strange guest tucked Muriel and her chair in under the table, waited respectfully for the king to settle his huge bulk into his chair and then sat down himself. Muriel seized the opportunity, while Burney's gaze was fixed upon her father, to steal a swift glance of curiosity at their guest.

She saw a man under thirty years of age, about six feet tall, straight from shoulder to hip, slim, small-boned, wiry, weighing perhaps a hundred and sixty pounds. His head was nobly formed and covered with an extraordinarily thick tatch of jet-black, wavy hair; his eyes were very dark blue with heavy long lashes that caused one to think, at first sight, that the young man had accumulated some soot on them. A slightly beaked Castilian nose arose out of a patrician countenance, his teeth were even, white and well cared for. He was, decidedly, an outdoor type of man, tanned to a brick red. Also he was thirty days overdue on a haircut.

Muriel noticed that he disposed of his soup without gustatory riot. When the salad, which in the West is usually served after the soup, came on, she noticed that Mr. Burney chose, with unerring precision, the salad fork; hence she made up her mind that the king had not erred socially by inviting this wandering cowboy to dinner at his castle.

"What a vast difference between grub and food," Mr. Burney sighed presently. "It is a hard two days' ride between your domain and Martin Bruce's ranch, sir, and there are no inns enroute. Having left Mr. Bruce's employ very suddenly and in bad odor, I did not carry any sustenance with me, so naturally my appetite is keener than usual."

"Get fired?" His Majesty queried.

"No, sir. Just quit."

"At the start of the calf round-up? Must have had a fight with somebody."

"I did, sir."

"Who won?"

"I did, sir."

"Then," said the king, "you must have had a run-in with Martin Bruce or his riding boss and quit to avoid being fired."

"You are very astute, Your Royal Highness."

"I told you not to call me such names," the king warned.

"You told me not to allude to you as Your Majesty or king. I respected your wishes. But you are a prince to invite me to dinner and give me a civilized room and bath for the night; hence I now address you according to your real rank."

"I love that," Muriel cried. "The newspapers always refer to Dad as The Cattle King."

"I don't like it," His Majesty growled.

"You'll have to stand for it, darling," his daughter assured him. "Go ahead, Mr. Burney. I like it."

"Thank you, Princess."

"Will you try some of these brandied peaches, Sir Knight?"

"Rutbush!" growled the king. "Now then, what did you end that coyote, Martin Bruce, quarrel about, young man?"

"I wouldn't sell him my horse—and he offered a whopping price for him, too. A thousand dollar."

"I'll give you two thousand dollars for him."

"Sorry, sir. He's not for sale."

"Two thousand dollars is a lot of money for a cowboy, and I'll bet a dollar cigar you haven't two dollars to your name."

"I'll collect that cigar after dinner, Your Highness, I have three dollars."

"Well, at least you and I will not quarrel about the horse," the king retorted smilingly, "although I did think I'd like to trade you out of him—for my daughter. I want a horse I can trust for her."

"With your permission, sir, I shall be happy to present him to the lady after the rodeo tomorrow, provided you will pay the expressage on a duplicate of him, now on pasture at the Santa Inez Rancho in California."

His Majesty laid down his knife and fork and stared at Ken Burney. "You reckless, improvident Hidalgo," he cried. "Your friends will have to pass the hat if you're ever given a decent funeral."

"Oh, say not so, Your Highness. Most gifts have a string to them and there's one attached to this one. In return for my horse I charge you, sir, with the responsibility of seeing to it that I am decently interred; and I warn you that my funeral will be expensive, because you'll have to ship me back to Tres Pinos, California, to lie with my ancestors, and, as you probably know, the railroad charges one full fare for a corpse and somebody has to accompany the body. Still, I'll not stick you too deeply. You may omit flowers."

Be Careful of Target Warning to Hunters

"Take the hunch out of hunting and the guess out of gunning by never shooting at movement or sound." Carlos Avery, president of the American Game Protective Association, says in urging hunters to co-operate with game officials and conservation groups who have recently inaugurated educational campaigns to stop the needless killing and wounding of many persons every year.

"Wind-blown tree limbs or bushes and movements of fellow hunters or live stock near by often cause optical illusions for the unwary," Mr. Avery says. "With the 1930 hunting season for many game and animal species about to open, every hunter can do his part to stop the loss of human life."

"The careful hunter always holds the muzzle of a loaded gun down or in such an upright position over his shoulder when walking that his comrades will not be hit if the gun goes off accidentally. Many old-timers always unload during rest periods and before they get into camp at night, ever aim at any one—you never can tell what might happen! When hunting, always be sure you see the game."

The Road to Kindness

If I can make the path of one dumb creature

A way of kindness and good cheer,

If I can see that God's immortal glory

Drew every living creature to Him very near,

If every move for those who suffer sorrow,

Were actuated by kind motives from above,

And every deed of ours, however trifling,

Were labelled by the golden rule of love,

If all Life's bitter gall and all its-rancor,

Were buried in a sea of kindness rare,

And all the trials of our progress, in the future,

Were entrusted to the Master's kind and loving care,

If every nation held aloft the flag of kindness,

So man, dumb beast could see and understand,

There'd be a world, indeed, we could rejoice in

And know, at last, the kindly human-ness of Man.

—Mary C. McEnroe in "Our Dumb Animals."

Canadian National Exhibition attendance eclipses that of any other annual exposition in the world.

Canadian National Exhibition crowds throng Dominion Government Building to view local products and those of far off lands.

Canada Gets Lion's Share of Tourist Trade — C.N.E. Powerful Attraction

Of all U.S. tourist money spent in foreign countries, Canada gets the lion's share—34 per cent.—according to Babson. Of all Canada's sightseeing attractions, none exerts the powerful annual draw of the Canadian National Exhibition in Toronto.

How many Americans visit this, the world's largest exposition, is not definitely known, but it is far up in the thousands, and every state contributes to the total. In a 1929 check-up made in one of the exposition's parking areas where 10,000 motors were lined side by side, there were license plates of 42 different states. Visitors come, in addition, by every rail and water route and by air.

Magnitude of the spectacle is possibly its greatest appeal.

This year, the dates are August 22 to September 6 inclusive. Canada's greatest annual celebration is a thousand expositions in one. Any attempt to survey it in the course of a few words is apt, therefore, to be bewildering. Its attractions range from art galleries to battles for world's swimming titles; from mammoth historical pageantry to "sea flea" races; from shows of blooded livestock to concerts by the Exhibition's gigantic 2,000-voice choir.

The scene of these festivals is both Exhibition Park and Exhibition City. Its 350 acres on the edge of Lake Ontario include wide stretches of velvet lawns, rose gardens, groves of trees and horticultural spectacles which are unique in themselves.

Its buildings, scores of them, are stately permanent edifices, carved out of stone or built of steel, brick and concrete. The magnificent new home of the National Motor Show alone cost more than a million. The Coliseum and Live Stock Pavilion, with an arena seating 12,000 people in comfort and 16½ acres under one roof, is the largest exhibition structure in the world. Exhibition City has nine miles of its own paved streets, its own internal transportation system, railroad terminal where sightseers step straight from the trains to the Park; as well as bus, coach, and street car lines, linking it with every other section of Toronto and outside points. Twenty million dollars, in all, is invested in equipment, land and buildings.

This year displays from every corner of the Dominion are being given special prominence in the showings. They come from points as scattered as the Yukon and the Canadian Rockies, the Pacific Coast fisheries, the wheat plains of the Prairies, northern gold fields, and southern industrial centres, habitants of Quebec and the Maritime Provinces. From the British Isles comes the finest, the largest and the most elaborate exhibits ever sent to this continent. A score of other nations will also be represented—the Gold Coast, British West Africa and Sierra Leone, Bermuda, Jamaica, the Orient and other parts of Europe and Asia.

The displays cover art, agriculture and industry. A way in Exhibition City is a transcontinental tour through Canada in miniature, and a bird's-eye view of the globe.

The Exposition is one vast carnival. Thirty concert bands are heard in recital, including one great unit of outstanding musicians, the All-Canada Permanent Force Band under Captain Charles O'Neill of history: Quebec Citadel. Four times during exposition weeks, the spectacular 2,000-voice choir under Dr. H. A. Fricker, M.A., F.R.C.O., attracts music lovers from widely scattered sections of America to hear its concerts.

Every evening on a thousand-foot stage, 1,500 performers appear in a huge musical pageant and dramatic spectacle, "Les Voyageurs," before audiences averaging 25,000 nightly. This enormous production, unequalled anywhere else on the continent, is the climax of each day's celebration and concludes with a pyrotechnic blaze of light and color which uses the entire skyline as its background.

Sport spectacles are daily events. On August 27th picked natators from the four corners of the world compete in a 15-mile swimming Marathon for a fortune in prizes and a world championship. Preceding this on August 22nd, international mermaids race for the women's world title over a 10-mile distance. These swims are held on the Exposition waterfront with every foot of the course in plain view to spectators scattered along a mile and a half of sea-wall and boulevard. Exhibition Park has a natural grand stand with sightseeing accommodation for a quarter of a million individuals.

The roar of the mosquito fleet in the International Outboard Motorboat speed trials is a thrill in any language. Seaplane races with international competitors are equally exciting. World champions will also appear in rowing and sculling events, canoeing and yacht races. Radio announcers whose names are known to every fan in America will broadcast a number of these contests.

For good measure there are dog and cat shows, a baby show, judging competitions, floral parade, warriors' parade, fashion and handicraft shows, a superb horse show in the Coliseum's tanbark arena, and a mile of midway which includes practically every known variety of amusement devices.

The Canadian National Exhibition is easy to reach. Fifty-five million Americans live within 500 miles of Toronto. There are special rates on all railroads, steamship lines, and airways. A network of de luxe highways lead to the Exhibition from every point of entry on the U.S. border. Hotel accommodation includes some of the finest hosteleries on the continent, among them the largest and most luxurious in the British Empire.

But a feature of Toronto during the annual exposition which always impresses visitors is the city's hospitality to its guests. Thousands of homes are thrown open to visitors where modern and comfortable accommodation may be secured. Under the direction of the Canadian National Exhibition an elaborate downtown Information Bureau offers complete details of available residences. All are carefully inspected and approved.

For half a century Toronto's hospitality at this time has been a civic tradition. Rates are not raised above normal. There is not only ample accommodation, but inexpensive accommodation—no lack of it. This year will be one of the greatest and most spectacular celebrations in the Canadian National Exhibition's entire history, and as a holiday trip, one which is entirely alone in the diversity of its attractions.

The basement of the United Church was the scene of a capacity gathering on Friday evening last, it being the occasion of a social gathering in honor of M. J. and Mrs. Wilker before their departure to their new home in Toronto. An address and presentation of an engraved gold watch was made to Mr. Wilker and a pair of silver plated candlesticks to Mrs. Wilker, on behalf of the Sunday School and Park Board, where Mr. Wilker has been actively engaged as superintendent and chairman, respectively. A banquet was served by the ladies of the church and a musical program and social evening was enjoyed by all.

A serious accident occurred on Saturday night last on the road through the swamp north of here. Two cars, one driven by Geo. Todd, of Goodwood, and the other following him, and driven by Mr. Morin, also of Goodwood, were going north. It is alleged that Morin endeavored to pass Todd, and the result was the two cars started racing and going at an excessive rate of speed, as one of the speeders said 45 or 50 miles an hour. Owing to the dust they were raising and darkness they did not see a team of horses and wagon coming south driven by Walter Miller. Morin's car struck the team, killing one of the horses instantaneously, threw the wagon into the marsh and Mr. Miller over the fence. Mr. Miller was unconscious for a long time. He was badly bruised and cut, and for a time his condition was considered serious, but he is expected to recover. In the car with Morin was his mother, who is said to be seriously injured. The person who was responsible for the accident should be severely dealt with.

Impressive Spectacle at Hamilton Crowds Cheer Empire Contestants

Records Are Broken—Canadian Marks Fall—British Note Through All Events

Athletic history was made at Hamilton on Saturday when, under the bluest of skies, the first British Empire Games held in an overseas Dominion were witnessed by the largest throng ever attracted by a track and field program.

Among the 17,000 people were his Excellency Viscount Willingdon, Governor-General of Canada; Hon. Richard B. Bennett, Prime Minister; Hon. G. Howard Ferguson, Premier of Ontario; Edward W. Beatty, K.C., President of the Canadian Pacific Railway and Chairman of the Empire Games Committee; and Count Badlet-Latou, President of the International Olympic Committee.

These games, the consummation of an idea fostered by M. M. Robinson of Hamilton, Secretary of the Canadian Olympic Committee, are expected to do much to cement the bonds of Empire.

Smallcombe's Victory

Fittingly enough, to a Canadian, Gordon Smallcombe of Toronto West End Y.M.C.A., went the distinction of winning the first final competition of the day, and, in doing so, the stalwart six-footer created a new Canadian record. Smallcombe, in the running hop, step and jump, clearly demonstrated his superiority, his winning mark being one foot, three and a half inches better than the previous Canadian record, and nearly eighteen inches farther than his nearest competitor.

Promptly at 2.30 p.m. the scheduled starting time, the Princess Louise, Argyll and Sutherland Highlanders' Band, under Captain Harry Stairs, bandmaster, struck up "God Save the King," and immediately following, to the sound of "The British Grenadiers," the west gate of the stadium opened, and a burly Scot, bushy and a', entered with a huge Union Jack. Following came a band of eight athletes from Newfoundland, with white blazers trimmed with red, and wearing white flannel trousers. Bermuda was next in line with eight athletes, wearing navy blue blazers, followed by a band of eight athletes from British Guiana, including the famous Phil Edwards, a member of the last Canadian Olympic team, Australia, with Bobby Pearce carrying the flag, numbered eleven contestants sporting green blazers piped with yellow; and behind them was the South Africa delegation, twenty-six strong, and including three young girls. The blazers of the South Africans were dark green in color. New Zealand also boasted twenty-six athletes, who were distinctive in their black blazers and white trousers. Wales and Ireland followed in order, the land of Lloyd George represented by but two members, a husky athlete, carrying a standard imprinted "Wales" and a tiny young miss carrying a huge Welsh flag, predominant on which is a red dragon. Ireland's delegation also consisted of a standard-bearer and flag-carrier. Following Ireland came twenty-three from Scotland, prominent among whom were four young Scottish lassies in tartan skirts. In blue blazers and grey flannels, England's quota of 106 preceded the Canadians, 110 strong, who brought up the vanguard of the athletic army.

In Red and White

The Canadians gave the brightest dash of color, their red blazers, white trousers, and red-banded panama hats brightening the ensemble, as they marched around the track and brought up in-battalion-like formation in front of the stand. The teams of England and Canada flanked the athletes of the other countries as they lined up for the opening ceremonies. In all 329 took part in the parade. The officials remained in the stand until after the inaugural addresses were delivered and the meet declared officially opened.

The address of welcome was delivered by Hon. Richard B. Bennett, who also read cables from His Majesty the King and His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, expressing their best wishes for the success of the Empire Game. Premier Ferguson delivered a short address, welcoming the athletes to Ontario, and read cables from the Duke of Connaught and the Earl of Derby, one of England's most prominent sportsmen. Viscount Willingdon then paid tribute to those who had worked so indefatigably to bring the game to a reality, mentioning E. W. Beatty, the Chairman of the Games Committee in Canada; Sir James Leigh-Wood, Chairman for the Games Committee in England, and to Melville Marks Robinson, or "Bobby" Robinson as he was referred to by his Excellency. To Mr. Robinson, the Governor-General declared, should go much of the credit for the working out of the details of the games, which were now assured of success.

Williams Takes Oath

Then followed the formal taking of the oath of amateurism. All the flag-bearers formed in a circle before the Governor-General's box while Percy Williams, Canada's foremost athlete, mounted a dias and took the oath on behalf of all the competitors. It was a fine tribute paid to an athlete of whom the whole of Canada is most justly proud. The conclusion of Williams' declaration was the signal for a terrific bombardment of fireworks, small flags of all competing countries filling the air, which reverberated with the blasting of bombs. A flock of pigeons were then released, the birds circling over the stands and soaring away. This, an old Olympic custom, concluded the opening ceremonies and the athletics filed out to enter special stands for competitors. The Empire Games were on in earnest.

Summer Forests

The trees in summer glory stand, Forest on forest through the land, Bending towards the east with grace To watch the sun-god's morning face.

Shade on the forest land endows: Gently their branches fan the air, Rocking the songbirds cradled there.

And when the sunset sheds a sheen Of gold and rose on the deepest green, Then do the trees look best to me, Glimmering gold in the greenery.

Bending towards the west with grace To watch the sun-god's evening face, The trees in summer glory stand, Forest on forest through the land.

—Angela K. Dawes.

"Baked Apple" Tale Is Now Verified

State College, Pa.—That heat story about picking baked apples from the trees was given official and positive verification when Dr. G. L. Zundel, plant pathologist at the Pennsylvania State College, displayed in his office recently a collection of partially cooked apples that he had collected in Franklin County.

Dr. Zundel reported that on a trip through Franklin County 5 per cent. of the apples in the orchards he visited were partially baked.

In orchards near Scotland he reported 10 per cent. of the apples on the sunward sides of trees baked.

The smoke house variety seems to be most susceptible to old Sol's baking rays, he said.

HOW ONE WOMAN LOST 47 POUNDS OF FAT

"I have been taking Kruschen Salts for nearly 3 months. I have continued taking one teaspoonful in warm water every morning. I then weighed 217 pounds, was always bothered with pains in my back and lower part of abdomen and sides.

Now I am glad to say I am a well woman, feel much stronger, years younger and my weight is 170 pounds. I do not only feel better but I look better, so all my friends say.

I shall never be without Kruschen Salts. I will never cease taking my daily dose and more than glad to highly recommend it for the great good that is in it. —Mrs. S. A. Solomon.

P.S.—You may think I am exaggerating by writing such a long letter but truly I feel so indebted to you for putting out such wonderful salts that I cannot say enough."

Radio Step Forward in Iceberg Control

Recent reports by incoming steamships of icebergs in the North Atlantic recall the fact that, although eighteen years have passed since the Titanic struck an iceberg and sank off the Grand Banks of Newfoundland, the iceberg peril still exists despite the intensive effort of scientists to solve this dangerous problem.

Experiments have been conducted with sounding devices and radio equipment ever since the great sea disaster, but as yet no instrument has been proved sufficiently practical to pay for its installation on liners. Under the auspices of the Navy Department, investigators have succeeded in developing sounding apparatus which will detect submerged icebergs for a mile or more. With the great speed of modern ships and the lack of exactness in measuring their distance, these instruments have not, however, succeeded in achieving control over the iceberg peril.

Steamers today have one distinct advantage over those of a few years ago in warding off distress from icebergs. Because of the development of the radio compass or direction finder, rescue ships today are able to reach a ship in need of help much more quickly. Vessels equipped with the radio compass may follow this direction finder directly to the disabled ship without taking time to work out its position by longitude and latitude.

Anak Krakatau Island Disappears Into Sea

Batavia, Java.—The Island of Anak Krakatau, or translated into English, child of Krakatau, which on Aug. 8 had a height of 170 feet, had disappeared Aug. 9 beneath the surface of the sea during intense activity of the nearby volcano Krakatau.

Krakatau is a small island of the Malay archipelago, in Sunda Strait, between Sumatra and Java.

Boys Turn Green Parents Frantic

Ansonia, Conn.—Health authorities and private physicians here were besieged recently with telephone calls from frantic mothers who exclaimed, "Oh, doctor, what shall I do? My son has turned green!"

Eight boys who had gone to bed one night, appeared at the breakfast table with light green hair, green eyebrows and green eyelashes. The first attempt to restore the boys, who ranged from eight to thirteen years of age, to their natural colors, was made with soap and water, but the green appeared to be fast. All that a good shampoo did was to add some iridescent gleams to the greenness. Some of the boys, as they passed from sun to shade, altered their hues like the chameleon. By this time the startled parents were seeking medical advice.

Physicians were baffled to explain why a flaxen-haired child should suddenly turn to a greenish opalescence. The clinical thermometers showed no signs of fever, but some of the boys showed marked quickening of the pulse as they looked in the mirror at their changeable heads. In dark rooms a dim ghostly phosphorescence could be observed. Cases were recalled of hair growing white in a single night but not green or luminous.

As different hues chased one another over the head of one patient, a physician recalled having seen the same effect on the head of an ageing dandy and he pronounced that the boy had been inexpertly but rather splendidly dyed.

In the meantime the news was spreading about Ansonia, and the extent of the epidemic of northern light was realized. But what was the cause? Had some beauty shop been experimenting with a new recipe? All at once several persons hit on the theory that the lads had been swimming in the Naugatuck River, which is virtually one large vat of chemicals. The run-off water from factories is discharged, laden with compounds, into the river. The drug used as a green dye in one great knitting factory is colorless itself, but develops a series of handsome greens after it dries. This registers gorgeously on blonde hair, but does not affect the black.

Was Run Down Now Well Again

Takes Pleasure in Recommending Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

To the woman in the home illness is almost a calamity. Many a woman keeps on with her household duties when she is feeling ready to drop. The pills make rich, red blood which brings new strength and energy to weak, despondent sufferers. Concerning them, Mrs. Paul Rall, Coin du Banc, Que., says: "I was badly run-down, slept poorly, and awoke as tired as when I went to bed. My appetite was poor and I felt miserable. I took six boxes of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and they completely renewed my health."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 50 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

"Please teacher—"

Only teachers know how trying it is at times to deal with a roomful of children.

What a relief, sometimes, when closing hour comes.

Take time then, to make a cup of tea.

Nothing so soothing for tired nerves.

RED ROSE TEA "is good tea"

Two Qualities -- Red Label & Orange Pekoe

For All Who Mourn

That he was dear to you so many a year But darkens your distress? Would you he were less worthy and less dear

That you might grieve the less? He was a golden font that freely poured

What goldenly endures, And though that font be gone, its bounty, stored

And treasured, still is yours. The Past is deathless. Souls are wells too deep

To spend their purest gains. All that he gave to you is yours to keep

While memory remains. Who never had and lost, forlorn are they

Far more than you and I Who had and have. Grudge not the price we pay

For love that cannot die.

—Arthur Guiterman.

Before Her Baby Came

"I have used several bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and find it helps me wonderfully, especially before childbirth. I have five lovely children. After my last baby came I had a miserable pain in my right side so I bought another bottle of the Compound and I feel fine now. I work outside during the fruit season in addition to my household work."—Mrs. Charles Slingerland, R.R. #4, St. Catharines, Ontario.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

If baby has COLIC

CRY in the night. Colic! No cause for alarm if Castoria is handy. This pure vegetable preparation brings quick comfort, and can never harm. It is the sensible thing when children are ailing. Whether it's the stomach, or the little bowels; colic or constipation; or diarrhea. When tiny tongues are coated, or the breath is bad. Whenever there's need of gentle regulation. Children love the taste of Castoria, and its mildness makes it safe for frequent use.

And a more liberal dose of Castoria is always better for growing children than strong medicine meant only for adult use.

On investigating they found in the refreshment booth a keg of beer on tap, the contents of which was handed out to the picnickers who became exceedingly thirsty. The man in the booth was arrested on a charge of having liquor in other than his private residence.
